*Par conséquent, je dis qu'il y a les fléaux et les victimes, et rien de plus.
Si, disant cela, je deviens fléau moi-même, du moins, je n'y suis pas consentant.
J'essaie d'être un meurtrier innocent. Vous voyez que c'est n'est pas une grande ambition.*

(Consequently, I say that there are pestilences and victims, and nothing more. If in saying this I become a pestilence myself, at least I am not a consenting one. I am trying to be an innocent murderer. You see, it's not a high ambition.)

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Parts of this book were written while I was on sabbatical at the University of Texas, Austin and then again at the European University Institute, Florence. Special thanks are due to Professor Roy Mersky at Texas for his welcome and his ongoing encouragement. Professor Christian Joerges at the EUI gave me the unprecedented opportunity to participate in his project on the “Dark Legacy of European Law”, for which I am grateful.

In addition, I have been able to present parts of the book at the University of Southampton, Department of Law, the Centre for Social Theory, University of Warwick, and the Conference of Europeanists, Chicago. Thanks here are owed to Laurence Lustgarten, Ralf Rumkowski, and on ce more, Christian Joerges.

Jock Morrow provided early and invaluable research assistance for much of Chapter 4.

Some aspects of this book have appeared in different form elsewhere. Chapter 4 appears in a shortened version in the collection compiled by Christian Joerges and Navraj Galheigh, Darker Legacies of European Law (Oxford: Hart, 2003) and is published here with the kind permission of Richard Hart of Hart Publishing. Chapter 3 was published in its original form in 1999 in Volume 12 (4) of the International Journal of the Semiotics of Law, (pp. 397-417) and appears here with the kind permission of Kluwer Law International. Chapter 6 also had an early life in 1998, Volume 12 of Holocaust and Genocide Studies (pp. 139-58) and is published with thanks to Oxford University Press and by permission of The United States Holocaust Memorial Museum.

As always, special thanks to Kathryn.
