Acknowledgments

I owe thanks first of all to Dwight Kiel, who introduced me to the work of Michel Foucault a long time ago and encouraged us “to get down into the trenches” in order to apply Foucault’s ideas to contemporary social institutions. My colleagues at the University of Kansas School of Law, Sandy McKenzie and Peter Schanck, read endless early drafts, provided helpful comments and other support in the rough and early going. John Covell, then at Yale Press, and two anonymous peer reviewers provided very substantial assistance in improving the manuscript. I am thankful also to many others for their helpful comments on this project. They include Richard Abel, Mike Davis, Kim Dayton, John Elson, Jay Feinman, Jerry Frug, Bryant Garth, Mike Hoefflich, Frank Levy, Allan Hanson, Lauren Hoopes, Rex Martin, Martha Minow, Jeremy Paul, Alexander Somek, Chris Suggs, Bill Staples, Carol Warren and Fred Woodward. The University of Kansas and University of Kansas School of Law provided research grants and a sabbatical to support this project. I am thankful as well to the publisher and editors of Carolina Academic Press, especially Bob Conrow, for their guidance and help in bringing this manuscript to publication.
