ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Any endeavor of this kind typically draws on many sources of support. This book is no exception. I wish to thank my colleagues at the Puerto Rican/Latin American Studies Department at John Jay College of Criminal Justice-CUNY—Professors Luis Barrios, Francisco Chapman, Marcia Esparza, Jodie Roure, and Luis Álvarez—who individually and collectively provide the foundation for the important work that is advanced through the department. I am especially grateful to Marta Morales, Charles Frederick, Luis Barrios, and Edgar Rivera Colón for their assistance and constructive comments. I also wish to thank my research assistant, Rafael Torruella, and my department's office assistant, Christopher Aviles, for their help and commitment.

The research and other tasks involved in the production of this book would not have been possible without the support of two PSC/CUNY Research Grant Awards, along with the institutional support given by President Gerald W. Lynch, Provost Basil Wilson, Jacob Marini, and the Office of Sponsored Programs of John Jay College of Criminal Justice. Other colleagues at John Jay College who have lent direct or indirect support for this project include Professors Dorothy Moses Schulz, David Brotherton, and Michael Blitz. I am especially grateful for the efforts and support given by Timothy Stevens to this project. I am also deeply indebted to my students at John Jay College, who are an endless source of reflection and inspiration.

At John Jay College, I have also been fortunate to have been part of an important and dynamic initiative, the John Jay College-Family Life Center/Palenque, which is discussed in this book. I wish to thank the many people who have served as part of the staff of the program for their contributions and dedication to its success, including Luis Barrios, Marta Morales, Rafael Torruella, Claudia De La Cruz, Reynaldo García-Pantaleón, Diógenes Abréu, Héctor Rivera, Sandra María Esteves, Dagoberto López, Luisa Sánchez, Randall Contreras, and the John Jay College students who participated as mentors/facilitators. I also wish to acknowledge the support of the program's community-based partnership agencies, including Alianza Dominicana and the Dominican Women's Development Center, as well as the funding assistance provided by the Family and Community Violence Prevention Program (FCVP) headed by Dr. Laxley W. Rodney at Central States University in Ohio and the Office of Minority Health. Most importantly, I thank the youth of the Palenque program, who have consistently proven that Latina and Latino youth have much to offer to their communities and the greater society.

My appreciation is also extended to those who provided an array of information and assistance at different points during this project, including attorney Jorge González, Michael Zinzum of the Coalition against Police Abuse, Vina Camper of Police Watch, Elizabeth Schroeder of the ACLU Foundation of Southern California, Anthony Miranda, the Latino Officers Association, Iris Báez, the Anthony Báez Foundation, Alex Sánchez, Homies Unidos, Ralph Rivera, Klaudia M. Rivera, and Raul Añorve of the Instituto de Educación Popular del Sur de California.

I am grateful to the many Latina and Latino law enforcement personnel and Latina and Latino youth who have provided insights and encouragement for this work. This book was written in the hope of improving the lives of our Latina and Latino youth and communities.

A special final word of appreciation is reserved for my wife, Jeanette Guillén-Morín. I was truly blessed to have had her steadfast assistance and support throughout the duration of this project. I dedicate this book to her.
