CONTRIBUTORS

Karen Barber is Professor of African Cultural Anthropology at the Centre of West African Studies, University of Birmingham. She specializes in Yoruba culture, and also does comparative work on oral literature and popular culture across Africa. Her most recent book is, The Generation of Plays: Yoruba Popular Life in Theatre (2000).

Sandra T. Barnes is Professor of Anthropology at the University of Pennsylvania, Founding Director of its African Studies Center, and in 2004–05 a fellow at the Stanford University Humanities Center. She is the editor of Africa's Ogun: Old World and New, an interdisciplinary collection of recently expanded and revised essays that focus on West African religious culture and its continuing vitality in the diaspora. Her book, Patrons and Power: Creating a Political Community in Metropolitan Lagos (1986), won the Amaury Talbot Prize for the best book on Africa. She is President of the African Studies Association, and sits on the Boards of Directors of the American Council of Learned Societies and the Foundation for the Advancement of International Medical Education and Research. She has been a visiting faculty member at Johns Hopkins University and the University of Ibadan (Nigeria). Her current research focuses on West Africa: pre-colonial social and cultural life along the Guinea Coast and post-colonial popular culture.

Lynne Brydon is Senior Lecturer in the Centre of West African Studies, University of Birmingham (UK). Among her publications are Women in the Third World (with Sylvia Chant) and Adjusting Society: The World Bank, the IMF and Ghana (with Karen Legge). She co-edits Ghana Studies Review (with Takyiwaa Manuh), and is a member of the Editorial Collective of the Review of African Political Economy.

Andrea Cornwall is a Fellow at the Institute of Development Studies at the University of Sussex, where she works on the politics of participation, gender, and governance, and sexual and reproductive rights. Her publications include Dislocating Masculinity: Comparative Ethnographies (edited, with Nancy Lindisfarne, 1994), Realizing Rights: Transforming Approaches to Sexual and Repro- ductive Wellbeing (co-edited, with Alice Welbourn, 2002), Readings in Gender in Africa (James Currey, 2004), “Spending power: love, money and the re-configuration of gender relations in Ado-Odo, southwestern Nigeria” (American Ethnologist, 29:4, 2002), and “‘To be a man is more than a day’s work’: Shifting ideals of manliness in Ado-Odo, southwestern Nigeria” (in Lisa Lindsay and Stephan Miescher eds., Men and Masculinities in Modern Africa, Heinemann, 2003).

Jane I. Guyer is Professor of Anthropology at the Johns Hopkins University. Her research has focused on social and economic change in West and Central Africa over the past century. An African Niche Economy. Farming to Feed Ibadan 1968–88 (1997) studies a Yoruba town in the Ibadan hinterland, and Marginal Gains: Monetary Transactions in Atlantic Africa (2004) re-analyzes ethnographic and historical evidence from several areas, including Southern Nigeria. A co-edited book (with LaRay Denzer and Adigun Agbaje), Money Struggles and City Life: Devaluation in Ibadan and Other Urban Centers in Southern Nigeria, 1986–1996 (2002; 2003, Ibadan) addresses some aspects of the “confusion” of her topic for this volume.

Hermione Harris is a consultant researcher with the Information Centre about Asylum and Refugees (ICAR) at King’s College, London. Her publications include The Somali Community in the UK (2004). She has carried out extensive research on Yoruba churches in London, the subject of her doctoral thesis The Cherubim and Seraphim: the Concept and Practice of Empowerment in an African Church in London (2002).

Ogbu U. Kalu, formerly of the University of Nigeria, is the Henry Winters Luce Professor of World Christianity and Mission, McCormick Theological Seminary, Chicago, and Associate Director of Chicago Center for Global Ministries. His book, Embattled Gods: Christianization of Igboland, 1841–1991 was first published in 1996, and has been republished by Africa World Press. The University of South Africa Press is publishing his collection of essays, Clio in a Sacred Garb: Essays on Christian Presence and African Responses, 1900–2000. He is the editor of African Christianity: an African Story that is forthcoming under the Perspective Series, University of Pretoria, South Africa.

Axel Klein is the Head of the International Unit at the UK-based NGO Drug Scope, working on a range of issues including drug policy, prison reform, and civil society capacity building. He has published on drug policy and the informal sector in Nigeria, and is currently editing a volume on illicit drugs in Africa with Isidore Obot. Previous publications include Caribbean Drugs: from Criminalisation to Harm Reduction, edited with Anthony Harriott and Marcus Day, and Fragile Peace: State Failure, Violence and Development in Crisis Regions, co-edited with Tobias Debiel.

Kai Kresse is a Lecturer in Social Anthropology at the University of St. Andrews. His publications include Sagacious Reasoning: H. Odera Oruka in Memoriam (Frankfurt/New York Peter Lang, 1997), co-edited with Anke Graness (reprinted in an Africa-edition by East African Educational Publishers, Nairobi, 1999); Symbolisches Flanieren: Kulturphilosophische Streifzuege. (Hannover: Wehrhahn Verlag, 2001), co-edited with Roger Behrens & Ronnie Pellow; and, as editor, Reading Mudimbe, to appear as a special issue of Journal of African Cultural Studies (in press). He is currently finalizing a book manuscript on Swahili philosophical discourse, dealing with poets, thinkers, and intellectual practice in Mombasa. Recent articles in the Journal of Religion in Africa (2003), and edited collections, e.g. Scott Reese (ed), The Transmission of Learning in Islamic Africa. (Leiden: Brill, 2004). He was awarded the Evans-Pritchard Lectureship at All Souls College, Oxford, for the academic year 2005–6. He is also part of the editorial team of the online journal Polylog: Forum for Intercultural Philosophy. He holds an M.A. in Philosophy from the University of Hamburg, where he also studied Swahili, and an MSc and a Ph.D. in Anthropology and African Studies from the University of London.

Matthew H. Kukah is a Catholic priest, Vicar General, Archdiocese of Kaduna, Nigeria. He studied philosophy and theology at St Augustine's Seminary, Jos, and received his MA in Peace Studies at Bradford University, and his Ph.D. at the School of African and Oriental Studies, London. He has served as the Secretary General, Catholic Secretariat of Nigeria; Member, Human Rights Violations Investigation Commission; Senior Rhodes Scholar, St Antony's College, Oxford; and the Edward Mason Fellow, Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University.

Murray Last is Professor Emeritus in the Department of Anthropology, University College London. He specializes in both the pre-colonial history of Muslim northern Nigeria and the ethnography of illness and healing. He has been working in and on northern Nigeria since 1961, researching a wide variety of subjects with colleagues in Bayero University and elsewhere; he visits Nigeria every year. In 1967 he published The Sokoto Caliphate (London: Longmans Green), and edited (with G.L. Chavunduka), The Professionalisation of African Medicine in 1986 (Manchester: Manchester University Press for International African Institute); in addition he has over seventy publications on history and on anthropology. Carola Lentz is Professor of Social Anthropology at the Johannes Gutenberg University of Mainz, Germany, and was a fellow of the Netherland's Institute for Advanced Studies in 2000–2001. Following her doctoral research on labor migration and ethnicity in Ecuador, she has conducted research on ethnicity, elite formation, and history in North-Western Ghana. She is author of Ethnic Unity and Local Patriotism: The Production of History in North-Western Ghana, 1870–1990 (forthcoming), as well many related articles, and co-editor of Ethnicity in Ghana: The Limits of Invention (2000). Further publications include the edited volumes Les Dagara et leurs voisins: Histoire de peuplement et relations interethniques au sud-ouest du Burkina Faso (2001), and Histoire du peuplement et relations interethnique au Burkina Faso (2003). Her current research focuses on mobility, land rights, and the politics of belonging in North-Western Ghana and South-Western Burkina Faso.

John M. Lonsdale is Emeritus Professor of Modern African History at the University of Cambridge, and Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. His published work includes Unhappy Valley: Conflict in Kenya and Africa (1992, with Bruce Berman), and Mau Mau and Nationhood (edited, with Atieno Odhiambo, 2003). He is a past general editor of the Cambridge University Press African Studies Series, past chairman of the African Studies Centre at Cambridge and past president of the African Studies Association of the United Kingdom. He is currently working on the intellectual life of Jomo Kenyatta, the British decolonization of Kenya, and the historical relationship between religion and politics in Kenya.

T. C. McCaskie is Professor of Asante History, Centre of West African Studies, University of Birmingham, U.K. He is author of State and Society in Pre-Colonial Asante (Cambridge University Press, 1995) and Asante Identities: History and Modernity in an African Village 1850–1950 (Indiana and Edinburgh University Presses, 2000), as well as numerous book chapters and journal articles on Asante history and culture. Most recently, he was co-editor with A. Adu Boahen, E. Akyeampong, N. Lawler, and I. Wilks of The History of Ashanti Kings and the whole country itself, and Other Writings by Otumfuo, Nana Agyeman Prempeh I (Oxford University Press for the British Academy). He is presently writing a book on contemporary Asante.

Birgit Meyer is professor of Religion and Society in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at the University of Amsterdam, and professor of the anthropology of religion at the Free University, Amsterdam. Her publications include Translating the Devil. Religion and Modernity Among the Ewe in Ghana (1999), Globalization and Identity: Dialectics of Flow and Closure (1999, edited with Peter Geschiere). Magic and Modernity: Interfaces of Revelation and Concealment (edited with Peter Pels), and Religion, Media and the Public Sphere (in press, edited with Annelies Moors). Her current research focuses on the interface of religion and media in Ghana.

Insa Nolte is a lecturer at the Centre of West African Studies at the University of Birmingham, UK. Her publications include “Identity and Violence: The Politics of Youth in Ijebu-Remo, Nigeria” (2004, JMAS 42/1), and “Chieftaincy and the State in Abacha’s Nigeria: Kingship, Political Rivalry and Competing Histories in Abeokuta During the 1990s” (2002, Africa 72/3). She is presently writing a monograph on power, politics and Obafemi Awolowo in Ijebu-Remo.

Matthews A. Ojo completed his doctoral studies in theology at the University of London (School of Oriental and African Studies, and King’s College, London) in 1987. His research interest is African Christianity with particular reference to the Pentecostal and Charismatic movements. He has published extensively in this field, and recently in the area of religion and politics in Nigeria. In 1999, he was involved in a British Academy-funded research on religion and media in Nigeria. In 2002, he was a Visiting Professor at Harvard University Divinity School and a Senior Fellow at the Centre for the Study of World Religions, Harvard University. He is presently a Professor and Head of Department of Religious Studies, Obafemi Awolowo University, Nigeria.
