Acknowledgments:

I am grateful for suggestions, encouragement, or both to Gerard V. Bradley, Nicole Stelle Garnett, Richard W. Garnett, Mary Ann Glendon, Kenneth L. Karst, Nicholas Kasirer, M. Cathleen Kaveny, Randy Lee, John C. Nagle, John T. Noonan, Jr., Walter F. Pratt, Jr., Charles E. Rice, John H. Robinson, Thomas L. Shaffer, Steven D. Smith, and J. Eric Smithburn. I am also grateful to the student editors of Volume 76 of the Notre Dame Law Review, where this study first appeared. In updating it for publication in book form, I had occasion to compare the form in which I sent it to them with the form in which they published it, and to take due note of their careful corrections and amplifications of the notes. They have given new meaning to the concept of a substantive cite check.
