Carolina Academic Press Studies on Globalization and Society

The mission of the Carolina Academic Press SGS Series is to publish books on the effect of international transactions on social frameworks. The transactions, which cross national boundaries, may be legal, business, political, cultural, philosophical, or theological in nature. The frameworks may be the law, economy, government, customs, values, or religion of a society, group of societies, or the world community.

Books published in the SGS Series are intended for a world-wide audience of scholars and advanced-level students in academic institutions, researchers in public and private organizations, and educated readers in the general public. Accordingly, the books may be monographs, textbooks, edited collections, or references.

To attract this thoughtful audience, the SGS Series is uncompromising in two respects. First, the books should be provocative. They should deal with a controversial issue, and offer innovative methodologies and normative analyses. Second, the books should be written in an accessible and engaging manner. They should be clear and appealing in the identification of the issue, the methodology employed, and the analytical discussion.

Carolina Academic Press welcomes proposals for the SGS Series. A proposal may be submitted on line through the website of the Press, www.cap-press.com, or sent to:

Dr. Keith Sipe, President, Carolina Academic Press/700 Kent Street/
