Preface

The struggle for social justice and the study of social justice are not confined to a single discipline. This book is an example of the multidisciplinary nature of this struggle. The chapters of this book represent a vast array of disciplines: Communication, Criminology, Critical Studies, Education, Ethnic Studies, Geography, History, Justice Studies, Law, Political Science, Sociology, and Urban Planning. It is our hope that those who read this volume will recognize the importance of multiple perspectives in the study of and fight for social justice.

Acknowledgments

A project like this, to be successful, requires a lot of committed people. We would like to thank the authors for their dedication to social justice and their topics; Jill Watts, CSUSM History professor, for her help with the proposal; the faculty and students in the Department of Sociology at CSUSM for their understanding and support; Rachel Gragg, Federal Policy Director of the Workforce Alliance, for her helpful discussions on poverty public policy; Allison Carr, CSUSM librarian, for her invaluable research help; Jeff Henson for his help with the photographs, and Clayton Bower, Raeven Chandler, Mandi Contreras, Heather Donoho, and especially, Garrett Herr, for assisting in the first round of editing tasks. In addition, we would like to thank the staff at Carolina Academic Press—Taylor Arnold for his help with the proposal, Beth Hall for answering all those crazy questions throughout the creation of this volume, Karen Clayton for the hours she spent helping us finalize the book, and Tim Colton for his artistic eye. Thank you!

Finally, projects like these can rarely be undertaken without the commitment and sacrifices of those close to us. Kristin would like to thank her husband and son, Jeff and William, for understanding and spending so many “just the dudes” nights while Mommy finished her work; and a special thanks to Christopher for hanging out with Mommy until the bitter end. Richelle would like to thank her family and friends for all their support and patience.
