Administration in the Public Interest
For Debbie, Michelle, Joshua, and “Dakota” (our pet Schnauzer).

SMK

For the Next Christendom.

BSC
Summary Table of Contents

Part I
Foundations of Administration in the Public Interest

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Chapter</th>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>Administration in the Public Interest</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>Public Administration History and Public Interest Practices</td>
<td>27</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td>The Constitution, Administrative Law, and Public Interest Principles</td>
<td>51</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
<td>Federalism, States, Communities, and Public Interest Policies</td>
<td>77</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Part II
Applications of Administration in the Public Interest

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Chapter</th>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>Organization Theory and the Public Interest</td>
<td>113</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
<td>Public Management and the Public Interest</td>
<td>139</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7</td>
<td>Public Personnel Management and the Public Interest</td>
<td>165</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8</td>
<td>Public Budgeting, Finance, and the Public Interest</td>
<td>189</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9</td>
<td>Public Policy, Policy Analysis, and the Public Interest</td>
<td>225</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10</td>
<td>Nonprofit Organizations, Faith-Based Initiatives, and the Public Interest</td>
<td>249</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Part III
Lessons of Administration in the Public Interest

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Chapter</th>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>11</td>
<td>Administrative Ethics and the Public Interest</td>
<td>277</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12</td>
<td>The Future and Hope of Administration in the Public Interest</td>
<td>307</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Contents

Preface xv
Acknowledgments xix

Part I

Foundations of Administration in the Public Interest

Chapter 1 • Administration in the Public Interest

- Chapter Objectives 3
- So, What’s Wrong with Real Bureaucracy? 4
- The Cycle of Scandal 7
- The Public Interest Response 8
- What Is This Thing Called “The Public Interest”? 10
- Context and Characteristics of the Public Interest 10
- The Commons 12
- Richard Flathman and the Universalizability Principle 12
- Various Interpretations 14
- Conclusion 19
- The Public Interest and the Federal Communications Commission 19
- Action Steps 23
- Exam Review Preparation 24
- Key Concepts 24
- Recommended Readings 25
- Related Web Sites 25

Chapter 2 • Public Administration History and Public Interest Practices

- Chapter Objectives 27
- Introduction 27
- What Is Public Administration? 29
- The Evolution of Public Administration 29
- The Founding Period (1787–1829) 32
- Pre-Civil War through Reconstruction (1829–1876) 33
- Pre- Classical Period (1876–1900) 34
- Classical Period (1900–1937) 35
- The Behavioral Revolution (1937–1960) 38
- Management Emphasis (1960–1968) 40
- The New Public Administration (1968–1984) 41
CONTENTS

The Re-Founding of Public Administration (1984–Present) 42
Waves of Change (1992–Present) 43
Conclusion 46
Action Steps 47
Exam Review Preparation 48
Key Concepts 48
Recommended Readings 49
Related Web Sites 49

Chapter 3 • The Constitution, Administrative Law, and Public Interest Principles 51
Chapter Objectives 51
Introduction 51
Constitutionalism 53
The Constitution as a Process 54
Freedom, Property, and Equality 57
Freedom 59
Property 60
Equality 61
Due Process and Administrative Law 65
Due Process 65
Administrative Procedures Act 68
Conclusion 70
Action Steps 71
Exam Review Preparation 72
Key Concepts 73
Recommended Readings 74
Related Web Sites 74

Chapter 4 • Federalism, States, Communities, and Public Interest Policies 77
Chapter Objectives 77
Introduction 78
Federalism 79
Constituting Federalism 79
Changing Face of Federalism 82
Unfunded Federalism 84
Public Administration at the State and Local Levels 85
Studying Public Administration in State and Local Communities 86
State and Local Government Reforms 90
State Executive Reorganizations 92
State Governments 93
Counties 95
Municipalities 96
Special Districts 98
Education Policy 99
Planning and Zoning 100
E-Government 102
Crisis Management 103
Conclusion 106
CONTENTS

Chapter 5 • Organization Theory and the Public Interest 113
  Chapter Objectives 113
  Introduction 113
  History of Organizations and Organization Theory 114
  Moses and the Bible 115
  Ancients and Organizations 115
  The Americanization of European Designs 116
  Closed System: The Classical Theories 118
  The Classical School 118
  Bureaucratic Politics: The Influence of Dwight Waldo 123
  Open Systems: Modern Theories 124
  Informal Organizations 125
  Decision-Making Approach 126
  Neo-Classical Approach 127
  Systems Approach 128
  Organizational Learning 129
  Public-Private Differences 131
  Differences between Public and Private Organizations and Officials 132
  Conclusion 133
  Action Steps 134
  Exam Review Preparation 135
  Key Concepts 136
  Recommended Readings 136
  Related Web Sites 137

Chapter 6 • Public Management and the Public Interest 139
  Chapter Objectives 139
  Public Management 139
  Defining Public Management 140
  Explaining Public Management 141
  Strategic Planning 144
  Performance Measurement 146
  Theoretical Foundations of the New Public Service 149
  The Practice of New Public Service 151
  Contrasting Management and Leadership in the Public Interest 156
  What Is Leadership? 156
  Similarities with Management 157
  Conclusion: Management, Leadership, and the Public Interest 159
  Action Steps 159
  Exam Review Preparation 160
CONTENTS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Chapter 7 · Public Personnel Management and the Public Interest</th>
<th>165</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Chapter Objectives</td>
<td>165</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Introduction</td>
<td>165</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Guardians (1787–1829)</td>
<td>166</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Spoils Period (1829–1883)</td>
<td>167</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Reform Period (1883–1906)</td>
<td>168</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Management Period (1906–1955)</td>
<td>170</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Professional Career Period (1955–Present)</td>
<td>171</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Reinvention (1990s)</td>
<td>173</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Basics of Public Personnel Management</td>
<td>174</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Process of Personnel Administration</td>
<td>176</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Historical Precedents</td>
<td>180</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Process of Labor-Management Negotiations</td>
<td>181</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Whistle-Blowing</td>
<td>182</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Affirmative Action</td>
<td>183</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Conclusion: Pursuing the Public Interest</td>
<td>184</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Action Steps</td>
<td>185</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Exam Review Preparation</td>
<td>186</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Key Concepts</td>
<td>187</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Recommended Readings</td>
<td>187</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Related Web Sites</td>
<td>188</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Chapter 8 · Public Budgeting, Finance, and the Public Interest</th>
<th>189</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Chapter Objectives</td>
<td>189</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Introduction</td>
<td>189</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What Is Public Budgeting?</td>
<td>190</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Colonial Period</td>
<td>191</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The 1800s</td>
<td>193</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The 1900s</td>
<td>194</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Budgeting Styles and Techniques</td>
<td>199</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Brief History of the U.S. Tax System</td>
<td>203</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Why Taxes at All?</td>
<td>204</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Expenditures: Where Is It All Going?</td>
<td>207</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Federal Budgeting</td>
<td>208</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Budget Actors and Goals</td>
<td>210</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Federal Budgetary Process</td>
<td>212</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>State Budgeting</td>
<td>215</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Local Budgeting</td>
<td>216</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Legislative Controls on Deficits and Deficit Spending</td>
<td>218</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Conclusion: Budgeting and the Public Interest</td>
<td>220</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Action Steps</td>
<td>221</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Exam Review Preparation</td>
<td>222</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Key Concepts</td>
<td>222</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Chapter 9 • Public Policy, Policy Analysis, and the Public Interest

Chapter Objectives

1. Introduction to the Study of Public Policy
2. Public Policy and Values
3. Public Policy and the Public Interest
4. Theories of Public Policy
5. Policy Environment(s)
6. Traditional Institutional Policymakers
7. Non-Traditional Policymakers
8. Policy Process: Focusing on the Stages or Cycles of Public Policy
9. Decision-Making Theories
10. The Foundation and Technique of Policy Analysis
11. Steps in Doing Policy Analysis
12. Evaluation
13. Conclusion
14. Action Steps
15. Exam Review Preparation
16. Key Concepts
17. Recommended Readings
18. Related Web Sites

Chapter 10 • Nonprofit Organizations, Faith-Based Initiatives, and the Public Interest

Chapter Objectives

1. Introduction
2. Non-profit Organizations: Foundation for Civil Society
3. Defining Our Terms
4. Scope and Growth of Nonprofits
5. Theories of Nonprofits
6. Public and Private Merger
7. The Influence of Religion
8. The Scientific Management of Giving
9. Historical Overview of Non-Profit Action
10. God and/in Government: Faith-Based Organizations
11. The Basics of FBOs
12. Brief History of Faith in Human Services Delivery
13. Connection with Government and Public Administration
14. The Politics and Administration of Faith-Based Organizations
15. Conclusion: Nonprofits, FBOs, and the Public Interest
16. Action Steps
17. Exam Review Preparation
18. Key Concepts
19. Recommended Readings
20. Related Web Sites
Part III
Lessons of Administration in the Public Interest

Chapter 11 • Administrative Ethics and the Public Interest 277
- Chapter Objectives 277
- Introduction 278
- Politically Correct 279
- Moral Character 280
- Moral Judgment 281
- Impact of Ethics 283
- Administrative Ethics 283
- Philosophical Ethics 284
- Terry Cooper’s Rational-Comprehensive Model 287
- John Rawls’ Justice as Fairness Model 290
- John Rohr’s Constitutional Regime Values 291
- Religion and Spirituality 293
- Separating Religious and Secular Ethics 294
- Administrative Accountability 297
- Conclusion: Ethics and the Public Interest 300
- Action Steps 302
- Exam Review Preparation 303
- Key Concepts 303
- Recommended Readings 304
- Related Web Sites 304

Chapter 12 • The Future and Hope of Administration in the Public Interest 307
- Chapter Objectives 307
- Introduction 307
- Trends for the Future 308
  - Trend One: Explosion in Communication, Economics, and Technology 309
  - Trend Two: Institutional and Organizational Change 310
  - Trend Three: Citizen-Participation and Public Influence 310
  - Trend Four: Ethical, Legal, and Political Challenges 311
- The Future and Hope of Public Administration 311
- The Role of Government 312
- Defining the Public 312
- Normative and Empirical 313
- The Future of American Public Administration 314
- Action Steps 315
- Exam Review Preparation 315
- Key Concepts 316
- Recommended Readings 316
- Related Web Sites 317

Notes 319

Index 349
Preface

Welcome to our survey of public administration! Whether you are looking for a basic overview of public administration—or an in-depth analysis of the concept of the public interest—we believe you will find this text useful. We hope you find it a more readable examination of public administration. We believe it is also more teachable for instructors, too! We have taught public administration for many years. More and more students study public administration for understanding federal, state and local bureaucracy, for their personal career management in public service, as well as for studies in criminal justice, social work, and other closely-related areas. Yet, nearly all public administration texts seem to be written in cryptic, professional jargon—the language of bureacratese. And few include an in-depth look at the reality of non-profit organizations or faith-based initiatives in public administration.

This book includes all the usual concepts, persons, histories, typologies, and chapter topics found in most public administration texts. Instead of civil service preparation; however, we thought you might instead enjoy a current-issues tour of conflicting values in public administration, such as constitutional rights, utilitarianism, and leadership. Our tour includes more specifics and interaction on nonprofits, faith-based initiatives, and private groups in public administration. Further, we weave it all together around a theme of the public interest. We believe in a commonsense understanding of public administration that is all about the public interest, the commons, and so forth—and we promise to be honest and drop the facade of pseudo-scientists in these pages. Each chapter relates concepts of public administration with action steps for things to do in your local setting, boxed inserts on interesting persons and events, exam preparation guide (someone will have to take a test somewhere!), recommended readings, and web sites.

We assume a post-positivist world in which the public interest is ordinary, common, meaningful, and central to any understanding of the activities of public administration. Those on a quest for a "value-free" public administration will find no refuge in these pages. We appreciate a philosophy of science beyond Nietzsche and logical positivism; we instead prefer a commonsense study of how things work, ordinary talk, and the experiences of real people. We prize a century of science history that debunks hypothesis-testing models of science; we favor more radically-empirical models of science such as grounded theory, the trash-can model, and other honest science. We seek a systematic understanding of administration in the public interest, such as described in the actual experiences of bureaucrats, officials, citizens and other real-world people—not by some hidden logic in the towers of academe. Scholars should have some acquaintance with these ideas, but many have not been exposed to the humbling feeling you get when you grasp the history and philosophy of science and realize just how little we know. And others have sold their souls for money or status in a brave new world. We have written this book without assuming your knowledge on these issues, but we will still re-visit and discuss these ideas periodically.

The public interest is just right as a concept for a better understanding of public administration—not too hard, not too soft. We are not like many contemporary secular cynics who discard the public interest as literal nonsense because its existence cannot be proven with any of the five senses—and similarly throw out other valued concepts like God, love, justice, and hope. We believe these cynics throw out the proverbial “baby with the bathwater;” in their hard-nosed pursuit of scientific truth, they betray the very empirical principles of science they supposedly uphold. When we take a radically empirical approach to the public interest, we find it within ordinary experiences, commonly shared meanings, and practical outcomes. But neither are we like scholastics that would prove the existence of the public interest by some elevated logic. Instead, we find the public interest to be written on the heart, a pattern of decision-making by good public administrators which belies the praxis of actions, rules, and being. Our perspective comes out of an appreciation which seems ascendant today—from religion to ethics to politics to science. Like so many of the important meanings of life, we find the public interest to be heartfelt and understood in context. We hope you may share this sense with this book in which we seek to present a more systematic, yet realistic, understanding of administration in the public interest.

We write this book with hope for a new generation of students of public administration. The discipline seems more balkanized than ever before. Our scholarly generation seems to have pushed away perspectives in the field such as the study of public choice, non-profits, faith-based organizations, criminal justice, education, health policy, and other areas, and embraced positivist, post-modern, and multi-cultural issues and topics, that really hold little if any relevance to the real world of public administration and public administrators engaged in the pursuit of the public interest.

Further, many scholars have left public administration for the attraction of greater freedom and prosperity in schools of business administration or other academic stations. For whatever reasons, we believe public administration is the poorer for it, both in numbers and ideas. But we are encouraged by many young scholars who seek to reintegrate these disparate perspectives and policy topics with traditional public administration approaches—often assembled around a broader conception of the public interest as we present in this book. To this future hope, we offer ADMINISTRATION IN THE PUBLIC INTEREST: PRINCIPLES, POLICIES, AND PRACTICES.

The text is divided into three parts. PART ONE introduces the conceptual, historical, constitutional, legal, and local framework, or the foundations of administration in the public interest. We discuss the public interest within contemporary and historical public administration and three perspectives on the nature of the public interest: practices, principles, and policies. The practices approach to the public interest focuses on life-world and leadership experiences in public administration and attends to the ethical theory of virtue. The principles approach to the public interest focuses on duties and rules, such as the Constitution and laws within public administration, and attends to the ethical theory of deontology. The policies approach to the public interest focuses on the calculation of happiness, individual preferences, or benefits/costs within public administration, attending to the ethical theory of utilitarianism. A highlight is our focus on state and local levels of public administration and a stand-alone chapter on federalism, states and communities, as well as the usual national level examples.

PART TWO is an examination of the core functions of public administration and the role of the public interest with each, or the applications of administration in the public interest. The core functions include getting organized, in theory and in-fact, and pursuit of the public interest through closed and open systems, in public and in private organizations. The core function of public management focuses on the entrepreneurial approaches and strategies of the New Public Service, and pursuit of the public interest through strategic planning and various leadership styles. Public personnel management attends to historical and current recruitment and human resources development in the public workplace, and pursuit of the public interest in issues such as whistle-blowing and loyalty, unions/collective bargaining, and affirmative action. Public budgeting and finance focuses on a pursuit of the public interest by the utilitarian calculations of economic benefit/costs analyses in these historical and current tax-finance and budgetary politics at the local, state, and federal levels. Our examination of public policy processes and analysis include a variety of public interest approaches in the study of policy-makers, policy-influencers, and the action procedures and investigative and evaluative methods of assessing public policies. And we include the core function of nonprofits and faith-based organizations, examining the history, public interest applications, and ascendence of the voluntary sector.

PART THREE brings together our findings on the public interest theme throughout the chapters with a future hope for public administration, or the lessons of administration in the public interest. Our analysis of administrative ethics applies public interest findings throughout the book to basic definitions and systems of philosophical ethics, including utilitarianism, deontology, and virtue ethics. We critique four dominant approaches to administrative ethics, including Terry Cooper’s rational-comprehensive model, John Rawls’ justice as fairness model, John Rohr’s constitutional regime values, and the approach of religion and spirituality in the workplace. We apply lessons of the public interest to current concerns with administrative accountability, professionalism, ethics codes, and efforts to control or elicit ethical administrative behavior. Finally, we conclude with a future hope, embedded in trends such as information technology and administrative ethics, to anticipate a truly public aspiration of administration in the public interest.
Acknowledgments

It is not possible to name all the persons—our faculty and mentors, colleagues, students, friends, and family—who have directly or indirectly contributed to the development of this book. It would require many more pages, and even then we may miss someone. Please know that you are all dearly appreciated—and you know who you are! We give special thanks to the support of chairpersons and administrators at our various academic stations that have supported this project, including Appalachian State University, Campbell University, Patrick Henry College, Regent University, and the University of North Texas. We appreciate this publication birthing by Keith Sipe, Publisher at Carolina Academic Press. We also give thanks to folks at Wadsworth Publishing Company, such as Editor-in-chief Michael Rosenberg, Editor Laurie Runion, and others who solicited this book, encouraged us with its potential, and sent us with good graces to Carolina Academic Press. And we are especially appreciative to the many anonymous outside reviewers who carefully read, gave insightful constructive criticism, and followed through with directions needed.

The intellectual and spiritual heart of this book came from the decades of dialog and friendship since we were young newbie junior faculty together in the Department of Political Science/Criminal Justice at Washington State University-Pullman. It was a time of intense debate over ideas, earnest aspirations for our shared discipline of public administration, and often laughter—at ourselves and our limitations, as well as at the comedy of our times. We sought to articulate a new perspective on life, spirituality, and even public administration that reflected the ascendance of the next global Christendom that we felt a part of—in which we remember the pools of transcendence. After the decades and many explorations of diverse academic stations, we now come together to express some small portion of that vision. We may not have written it all down in these pages, but we stand in responsibility for this book.