

LAW, LITERATURE, AND THERAPEUTIC JURISPRUDENCE

Amy D. Ronner

CAROLINA ACADEMIC PRESS
Durham, North Carolina

Copyright © 2010
Amy D. Ronner
All Rights Reserved

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Ronner, Amy D.

Law, literature, and therapeutic jurisprudence / Amy D. Ronner.

p. cm.

ISBN 978-1-59460-637-3 (alk. paper)

1. Law and literature. 2. Law in literature. 3. Therapeutic jurisprudence. I.
Title.

PN56.L33R66 2009

809'.933556--dc22

2009032772

CAROLINA ACADEMIC PRESS
700 Kent Street
Durham, North Carolina 27701
Telephone (919) 489-7486
Fax (919) 493-5668
www.cap-press.com

Printed in the United States of America

Dedicated to my husband, Michael P. Pacin, M.D., who makes all good things possible, and (borrowing the words of poet Theodore Roethke) is “lovely in [his] bones.”

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	ix
Chapter One • Law, Literature, and Therapeutic Jurisprudence: A Multidisciplinary Partnership	3
I. Introduction	3
II. Law and Literature	6
III. Therapeutic Jurisprudence	17
IV. A Natural Partnership	28
V. The Organization of the Book	41
Chapter Two • Law, Literature, and Therapeutic Criminal Justice	45
I. Introduction	45
II. Therapeutic Jurisprudence and Criminal Practice	46
A. Problem Solving Courts and TJ Practice	46
B. Confessions	52
III. Melville and the Therapeutic Sixth Amendment	56
A. Introduction	56
B. The Sixth Amendment and Voice	61
C. The Story of Billy Budd, Sailor	66
D. Billy Budd as the Voiceless Accused	69
E. Summation	84
IV. Dostoyevsky and Therapeutic Confessions	89
A. Introduction	89
B. Confessions and the Constitution	93
C. Raskolnikov's Compulsion to Confess	108
D. Dostoyevsky's Lessons in Therapeutic Jurisprudence	128
E. Summation	146
V. Conclusion	148

Chapter Three • Law, Literature, and Anti-Therapeutic Tribunals	151
I. Introduction	151
II. Anti-Therapeutic Tribunals and The Crucible	156
A. The Forces	159
B. The Hunters	165
C. The Damage	168
D. Miller’s Lessons in Anti-Therapeutic “Justice”	170
III. Anti-Therapeutic Tribunals and Harvard’s Secret Court	173
A. The Forces	176
B. The Hunters	181
C. The Damage	186
D. Wright’s Lessons in Anti-Therapeutic “Justice”	193
IV. Anti-Therapeutic Tribunals Today	199
A. The Forces	202
B. The Hunters	205
C. The Damage	220
V. Conclusion	223
Chapter Four • Law, Literature, and Therapeutic Legal Education	233
I. Introduction	233
II. Melville’s Bartleby	237
A. The Story	237
B. The Critics	239
III. Lessons in Therapeutic Jurisprudence	247
IV. Contemporary Law Practice	253
A. Human Machines	255
B. Walls	259
C. Hunger	263
V. Therapeutic Legal Education	268
A. Legal Education and Change	269
B. The Law School Clinics	271
C. The TJ Clinic: A Vaccine against Bartleby Syndrome	276
VI. Conclusion	286
Chapter Five • Conclusion: A “Crystal Age” Plus Passion	291
Index	297

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Because so many friends, colleagues, administrators, and scholars have helped me in many ways, there are too many to thank. Nevertheless, I will give it a try.

Special appreciation is due to my mentor, Professor Bruce J. Winick, who gave his precious time to ensure that this book would be born. Further, if it were not for Professor Winick, I probably would not have explored that synergy between Law and Literature and Therapeutic Jurisprudence. I would like to thank both Professors Winick and David B. Wexler, the co-founders of Therapeutic Jurisprudence, for introducing me to their inter-disciplinary movement and for including me in the many conferences and events that fostered my development as a teacher and scholar. I would also like to mention that Professors Winick and Wexler's many excellent books and articles have helped shape my career and philosophy. I also thank John McShane and Professors Barbara Babb, Marjorie Silver, Thomas Barton, and Bernie Perlmutter for being such great people and for cheering me on.

A major thank you is due to the Honorable Juan Ramirez, Jr., Chief Judge on the Third District Court of Appeal in Florida, who first came to me with Billy Budd and invited me to be his co-author in an article on Billy Budd and the Sixth Amendment. Not only did Judge Ramirez encourage me to connect my own Ph.D. studies with my legal background, but also agreed to have a portion of one of this book's chapters build upon ideas in our article.

This book is, to a great extent, about the power of the human heart. I want to acknowledge how lucky I am to have found a publisher with a heart of gold: I thank Keith Sipe of Carolina Academic Press profusely and extend appreciation to other caring people, like Linda Lacy, Karen Clayton, and Martha Hopper, at CAP for their wonderful work and support.

In addition, St. Thomas University School of Law has played a significant role in this book. I would like to thank my President, Monsignor Franklyn Casale, for supporting all of my endeavors and for being so kind to me over the years. I also thank Monsignor Andrew Anderson, who is a true champion of academic freedom and scholarly dialogue. My law school Dean, Alfredo Garcia, is also amazing: he has been generous with his time, advice, research stipends, and an unconditional friendship that spans almost two decades. Associate Dean Cecile Dykas also deserves applause for her painstaking efforts to facilitate my writing schedule and create a peaceful environment—one that nurtures creativity.

I would like to thank all of my friends and colleagues on the faculty. Here I extend a special thank you to Professors Daniel R. Gordon and Stephen Plass, both of whom mentored me and pushed me to accomplish my goals when I first made that leap from private practice back to academia. Further, I want Professor John Hernandez to know that he is precious and indispensable: I thank him for giving me materials and ideas that have culminated in books and articles. Professor Lenora Ledwon, a Law and Literature guru, also deserves recognition for being a role model and source of inspiration.

Further, this book would not have been completed without our law library administration and staff: while I thank all of them, I give extra credit to Karl T. Gruben for always being willing and ready to help, and to Katherine Brown, who, with her humor, energy, talent, and background in law and literature, went beyond the call of duty in assisting me with research. Because segments of chapters build upon ideas introduced in a previously published article, in Touro Law Review, I would like to thank them for giving me permission to incorporate revised portions of “The Learned-Helpless Lawyer.” I also thank Sarah Marx, who was Touro’s Editor-in-Chief, for being such a great help to me with the article itself and with the effort to spread the word about Therapeutic Jurisprudence.

I thank past research assistants, Gail Hamaty-Bird and Raisa Romanaelle, for their help. Here I cannot thank enough my past research assistant/teaching assistant and “right arm,” Warren Hawkins, who helped edit the book on top of a demanding workload. I also thank my present research assistant, A. Starkey De Soto, who is both brilliant and diligent. Further, I thank my faculty assistant, Mariela Torres, for her support with this and with everything I have done over the past eighteen years. I also thank administrative assistants Elaine Aliberti and Sharon L. Bogard, who have been caring and, at times, even life-saving.

There are other individuals that I carry around in my heart. My dear friend, ex-law student, fine lawyer, and super-family man, Brett Barfield, has fielded me valuable sources of information, has shared my hopes, and has inspired me for many years. Thank you, Brett! I also thank one of the finest lawyers I know, Elizabeth F. Schwartz. Although Ms. Schwartz is actively engaged in making the world a better place, she has never hesitated to give me time and help and share her thoughts. In addition, I could not publish a book without thanking my oldest friend from childhood, Susan Weiner, who has been a willing adventurer on our decades-long journey of trauma, joy, and change.

Finally, I thank once again my husband, Michael P. Pacin, M.D., who is the finest human being I have ever known. Without his patience, even temperament, and love, nothing would ever get done. I also thank the family (my only family), the one that Michael has given me: my sister-in law and her husband, Marilyn and Dan Beckman; my artist sister-in law, Phyllis Pacin; my step-children, Marc and Lisa Pacin; and my in-laws, Alice and Sid Pacin, who immediately embraced me as their daughter.