Acknowledgments

Many people have contributed to this book in many ways. We would like to thank the former and current judicial clerks and externs who contributed their time and expertise by filling out our survey and talking to us about their experiences: Megan Blazina, Corinna Venters, Stephanie Angolkar, Jennifer Rolfsrud, Chris Gangl, Shari Selander Frey, Jay Jerde, Colleen Daly, Erika Anderson, Dan Sagstetter, Ed Tillman, Austin Franklin, Joel Zylstra, Wes Abrahamson, Lauri Traub, Tricia Niebuhr, Rachel Bowe, Adam Maier, Adrienne Meyers, Katherine Manuel, Lara Nafziger, Amy Draeger, Brian Saame, Clare Priest, Emily Pelant, Greg Woodford, Jess Birken, Katie Dunn, Kevin Urbik, KrisAnn Kliebecker Lee, Natalie Runden, Nisha Taneja, Amy Busse, Anna Cheng, Christian Brandt, Jen Reise, Matt Resch, Megan Brennan, Megan Clinefelter, Andrea Specht, Alan Blair, and Marcia Miller.

We are also very grateful for the excellent research assistance we received from our student research assistants: Ashlee Bekish, Jessica Taralson, Ami C. Janda, Matt Thompson, and Tara James. We also thank the Hamline Law Library librarians, particularly Megan Jens and Regina Watson, for their first-rate assistance. Thank you, too, to Deb Halfman for her assistance in navigating Pacer and to Karen Westwood for her help completing the index to this book.

We owe special thanks to our wonderful legal research and writing colleagues, and many other colleagues at Hamline, who reviewed drafts and otherwise provided moral support, especially Mary Trevor, Kim Holst, Ken Swift, Kelly Mickelson, Nancy Lochner, Jeanne Eliou, Stachia Ullmann, and Jim Morrow. In particular, we thank Marcia Miller for her extensive proofreading and identification of “wonky” bits. And we would be lost without our amazing administrative assistants, Pam Buth and Gloria Strom.

For financial support for the project, we thank Hamline University School of Law and the Legal Writing Institute.

Finally, we would each like to thank our families for their support and forbearance: Jeff Ondich, Sam Dunnewold, and Elena Ondich; Donald, Nathan, and Mara Greenebaum; Scott Tofte, Noah Tofte, Luke Tofte, Emma Tofte, and Kristin Mickus.
