

EFFECTIVE LEADERSHIP IN POLICING

EFFECTIVE LEADERSHIP IN POLICING

Successful Traits and Habits

By
Joseph A. Schafer

CAROLINA ACADEMIC PRESS
Durham, North Carolina

Copyright © 2013
Joseph A. Schafer
All Rights Reserved

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Schafer, Joseph A. (Joseph Andrew), 1973-

Effective leadership in policing : successful traits and habits / Joseph A. Schafer.

p. cm.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

ISBN 978-1-59460-803-2 (alk. paper)

1. Police administration. 2. Police. I. Title.

HV7935.S33 2012

363.2068'4--dc23

2012023678

Carolina Academic Press
700 Kent Street
Durham, North Carolina 27701
Telephone (919) 489-7486
Fax (919) 493-5668
www.cap-press.com

Printed in the United States of America

In memory of

John G. Chase
Dallas Police Department
End of Watch: January 23, 1988

&

Jay P. Balchunas
Wisconsin Department of Justice
End of Watch: November 5, 2004

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements	xii
Chapter 1 • Introduction	3
Defining Leadership & Leaders	5
Leadership versus Management	7
Thinking about Effective Leadership	9
A Few Caveats	12
The Present Volume	14
Conclusion	17
Chapter 2 • Police Organizations & Leadership	19
Prevailing Administrative Models in American Policing	20
Problems with the Prevailing Bureaucratic Model	22
Problems for Operations	23
Problems for Employees	25
Problems for Consumers	26
Paths Forward	27
General Perspectives on Leaders & Leadership	27
Theory X & Theory Y	28
Transactional & Transformational Leadership	29
Servant Leadership	30
Situational Leadership	30
The Police Leadership Challenge	31
The Role of Followers	31
Good, but Not Great	33
Informal Leadership	33
What We Know About Police Leadership	34
Unanswered Questions and Unresolved Issues	36
Conclusions	38
Chapter 3 • Honesty & Integrity	39
The Importance of Honesty & Integrity in Policing	41
Perspectives from National Academy Participants	43
A Contrasting Perspective	47
Stepping Onto the Slippery Slope	49
Conclusions	50
Chapter 4 • Listening & Communication	53
The Context of Listening and Communicating	54
Listening: Why it Matters	56
Listening and Enhanced Decision Making	58

Listening: Leveraging Technology	59
Communication as Articulation	61
Communication as Selling	64
Communication as Reinforcement	66
Conclusions	67
Chapter 5 • Delegation and Empowerment	69
Traditional Police Bureaucracies, Delegation, & Empowerment	71
The Acts of Delegation and Empowerment	72
National Academy Perspectives	74
Delegation & Empowerment in Policing Applications	75
Why Delegation & Empowerment Matter	77
The Avoidance of Micromanagement	79
Benefits of Delegation & Empowerment	81
Delegation & Empowerment as Challenges for Followers	83
Delegation & Empowerment as Challenges for Leaders	84
Delegation & Empowerment as Developmental Tools	85
Conclusions	87
Chapter 6 • Interpersonal Skills	89
Personality	90
Balancing People & the Organization	93
Traits & Habits of Leaders with Interpersonal Competence	95
Leaders Show Care in How They Treat Others	96
Care & Compassion	97
Communication	100
Servant Leadership	100
Humor	102
Do Charisma and Interpersonal Relations Always Matter?	102
Conclusions	103
Chapter 7 • Trust & Fairness	105
Thinking About the Role of Trust	108
Honesty & Integrity	109
Calm Demeanor	110
Making the Right Decisions	111
When Trust is Lost	112
Fairness	114
Equal Treatment	116
Conclusions	118
Chapter 8 • Taking Action	121
The Emergence of Inaction	122
The Nature of Action	124
Identifying & Confronting Problems	124
Articulating a Vision	126
Making Well-Founded Choices	126

Action in the Face of Tradition	129
Taking Responsibility for Actions	131
Summary	131
Courage and Integrity over Self-Interests	132
Conclusions	134
Chapter 9 • Innovation & Growth	137
Followers Growth & Innovation	139
Organizational Growth & Innovation	142
Personal Growth & Innovation	147
Innovation & Growth: The Role of Futures Thinking	148
Conclusions	150
Chapter 10 • Leading by Example	151
What Qualifies a Leader to Lead?	153
How Do You Lead by Example?	156
What is the Message to Followers?	159
Conclusions	161
Chapter 11 • The Ineffective Police Leader	165
The Emergence of Ineffective Leaders and Leadership	166
Traits and Habits of the Ineffective Police Leader	168
Focus on Self over Others	169
Ego & Arrogance	170
Closed Minded	171
Micromanagement	172
Capricious Choices	173
Poor Work Ethic	173
Failure to Act	174
Ineffective Communication	175
Lack of Interpersonal Skills	176
Lack of Integrity	177
Conclusions	177
Chapter 12 • Suppose We Were Really Serious About Enhancing Police Leadership: Developing More Effective Leaders	181
Developing Effective Leaders	182
Suppose We Were Really Serious About Developing American Police Leadership	186
Issues for Leaders to Consider	187
Issues for Scholars to Consider	189
Paths Forward	191
Conclusions	193
Appendix A • Project Methodology	195
References	197
Index	213

Acknowledgments

This book would not have been possible without the support of a variety of individuals and institutions.

My access to the FBI Academy and the National Academy program was made possible through a visiting scholar initiative provided by the FBI Behavioral Science Unit (BSU). Supervisory Special Agent Dr. Carl J. Jensen III (retired FBI) worked to establish this opportunity at the FBI Academy to further futures research in the BSU. Carl also played a driving role in creating the Futures Working Group (FWG), a collaborative project between Police Futurists International and the FBI. The FWG was established in 2002 to advance strategic thinking, forecasting, and other futures perspectives in law enforcement. In 2004, Carl asked me to become a member of this group.

In 2006 I was fortunate to be selected as a visiting scholar at the FBI Academy and I served in that capacity until 2008. Carl retired shortly after I began the project that is the basis for this book. His vision and commitment to futures thinking has been carried forward by Chief Criminologist Dr. John P. Jarvis of the BSU. I am indebted to both Carl and John for their support throughout this project and other initiatives we have pursued. It has been my honor to consider Carl and John collaborators, coauthors, colleagues, and, most importantly, friends. "Mistakes were made," but I hope they will not judge this effort to fit that classification.

The FWG and the visiting scholar program were supported by retired BSU Unit Chief Dr. Steve Band. During my time in residence at the Academy, the program was being overseen by BSU Unit Chief Harry Kern and later by BSU Unit Chief Dr. Greg Vecchi. Access to the National Academy students was made possible by National Academy Unit Chief Greg Cappetta. I offer my heartfelt appreciation to the FBI Academy for their support of this project and the collective belief that these questions needed to be studied. It is my hope that this book justifies that support and investment.

I am indebted to the men and women who participated in the National Academy and were willing to participate in surveys, interviews, and informal conversations about leadership and contemporary policing. In the absence of their words and wisdom this project simply would not have been possible. My efforts were also supported by numerous FBI employees working throughout the Academy. During the many weeks I have been fortunate to spend in Quantico, the Academy personnel and the National Academy counselors have continually been gracious, insightful, and generous with their time. Countless hours of data entry and administrative support were provided by BSU interns and staff. The late Ms. Jeri Roberts assisted in many aspects of this project and other FWG efforts; her friendship and efforts will be missed. Though I cannot list and catalog all who encouraged, supported, contributed to, and informed this research effort, know that it is appreciated.

My initial research efforts were aided by a sabbatical leave I received from Southern Illinois University Carbondale. On-going efforts were supported by the Department of Criminology & Criminal Justice (CCJ) and the College of Liberal Arts. My thanks to Dean Alan Vaux (retired) and Dean (and former CCJ Chair) Kimberly Leonard for ensuring I was allowed time to periodically travel to Quantico to collect project data. Many CCJ graduate and undergraduate students assisted with data entry and library research in support of this project. They quietly contributed hundreds of hours to make this project a reality.

Members of the Futures Working Group and Police Futurists International have directly and indirectly contributed to aspects of the police leadership research project and this resulting book. Both groups have served as sources of endless support, wisdom, insight, and collegiality. Both groups continue to challenge my thinking and push me to grow as a scholar and a professional. I have been fortunate to stand upon the shoulder of giants.

Friends from a variety of policing backgrounds provided review and commentary on drafts of the chapters contained in this book. My thanks to Dr. Bernard “Bud” Levin (Waynesboro (VA) Police Department and Blue Ridge Community College), Chief Richard Myers (retired, Colorado Springs (CO) Police Department), Deputy Chief William Maki (retired, Waynesboro (VA) Police Department), Commander Geoff Huff (Ames (IA) Police Department), Dr. Michael Buerger (Bowling Green State University), Dr. Sandy Boyd (College of Marin), Professor Thomas Martinelli (formerly Detroit PD and now a police ethicist and trainer), and Officer Eric Heiple (US Secret Service Police). Melissa Haynes devoted many hours correcting typos, identifying errors, and raising pointed questions; her efforts appreciably improved the quality of the manuscript. These reviewers have often been collaborators in a variety of research and professional endeavors. They kindly contributed their time to help make this book better. It is my honor and good fortune to consider them friends. Much of this book is a credit to their comments and contributions; errors and omissions remain solely my fault.

None of this would have been possible without the love and support of my family. Chapter Five discusses an essay written by Chris Braiden, who writes about the importance of parents being loving enough to instill their children with strong roots and then having the courage to grant their children wings. It is only as an adult that I can realize and appreciate this aspect of how my parents, John and Grace, raised me. I was taught to ask questions and seek answers; as a father, I now aspire to do the same for my own children. Throughout this project my in-laws, Dan and Jodi, were gracious and generous with their time and home, allowing me the opportunity to travel and write. Finally, Shelby, Ellie, and Andrew provided love, support, encouragement, and patience that were essential to seeing this effort to the end. They sacrificed and endured much throughout this project, including my time out of town, my early morning writing sessions, and my periodic poor mood when the stress and demands of the project were at their greatest. Know that you always were, and always are, in my heart. Thank you.