

Jurisprudence

Theory and Context

Jurisprudence

Theory and Context

Sixth Edition

Brian Bix

CAROLINA ACADEMIC PRESS
Durham, North Carolina

Copyright © 2012 Brian Bix
All Rights Reserved

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Bix, Brian.

Jurisprudence : theory and context / Brian Bix. – 6th ed.
p. cm.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

ISBN 978-1-61163-311-5 (alk. paper)

1. Jurisprudence. 2. Law–Philosophy. I. Title.

K230.B5786A348 2012
340'.1–dc23

2012025898

Carolina Academic Press
700 Kent Street
Durham, NC 27701
Telephone (919) 489-7486
Fax (919) 493-5668
www.cap-press.com

This edition of
Jurisprudence: Theory and Context, 6th edition is published by arrangement with Sweet & Maxwell
part of Thomson Reuters (Professional) UK Limited
Aldgate House, 33 Aldgate High Street,
London EC3N 1DL

Printed in the United States of America

For Joseph Raz

Preface to the Sixth Edition

---

This book derives from efforts over the course of two decades to teach jurisprudence: in particular, the struggle to explain some of the more difficult ideas in the area in a way that could be understood by those new to the field, at the same time without simplifying the ideas to the point of distortion. This text is grounded in a combination of frustrations: the frustration I sometimes feel as a teacher, when I am unable to get across the beauty and subtlety of the great writers in legal theory<sup>1</sup>; and the frustration my students sometimes feel, when they are unable to understand me, due to my inability to explain the material in terms they can comprehend.

I do not underestimate the difficulty of the task I have set myself, and I am sure that this text does not always achieve all that it sets out to do. At the least, I hope that I do not appear to be hiding my failures behind legal or philosophical jargon. H. L. A. Hart once wrote the following in the course of discussing an assertion made by the American judge and theorist Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr.:

“To make this discovery with Holmes is to be with a guide whose words may leave you unconvinced, sometimes even repelled, but never mystified. Like our own [John] Austin . . . Holmes was sometimes clearly wrong; but again like Austin he was always wrong clearly.”<sup>2</sup>

I do not purport to be able to offer the powerful insights or the elegant prose of Holmes and Hart, but I do strive to emulate them in the more modest, but still difficult task, of expressing ideas in a sufficiently straightforward manner such that when I am wrong, I am “wrong clearly”.

This book is part introductory text and part commentary. In the preface to his classic text, The Concept of Law, Hart stated his hope that his book would “discourage the belief that a book on legal theory is primarily a book from which one learns what other books contain.”<sup>3</sup> My aims

---

<sup>1</sup> Unlike some writers, e.g. William Twining, “Academic Law and Legal Philosophy: The Significance of Herbert Hart”, (1979) 95 Law Quarterly Review 557, at pp. 565–580, I do not distinguish between “jurisprudence”, “legal theory”, and “legal philosophy”, and I will use those terms interchangeably.

<sup>2</sup> H. L. A. Hart, “Positivism and the Separation of Law and Morals”, 71 Harvard Law Review 593 (1958).

<sup>3</sup> H. L. A. Hart, The Concept of Law (2nd ed., Clarendon Press, Oxford, 1994), p. vi.

are less ambitious: the present text is a book meant to inform readers what other books contain—the idea being that the primary texts are not always as accessible as they might be. However, this book is distinctly not meant as a substitute for reading those primary texts: the hope and the assumption is that readers will go to the primary texts first, and will return to them again after obtaining whatever guidance is to be offered in these pages. Additionally, there are a number of places in the text where I go beyond a mere reporting of the debate, and try to add my own views to the discussion. This is especially true of Chapters 2 and 11, but, in smaller ways, throughout the other chapters of the book as well.

WHY JURISPRUDENCE?

Why study jurisprudence?

For many students, the question has a simple answer: for them, it is a required course which they must pass in order to graduate. For students in this situation, the questions about any jurisprudence book will be whether it can help them to learn enough of the material to get them where they need to be: passing the course (or doing sufficiently well in the course that their overall class standing is not adversely affected). However, even students who have such a minimal survival attitude towards the subject might want to know what further advantage they might obtain from whatever knowledge of the subject they happen to pick up.

At the practical level, reading and participating in jurisprudential discussions develops the ability to analyse and to think critically and creatively about the law. Such skills are always useful in legal practice, particularly when facing novel questions within the law or when trying to formulate and advocate novel approaches to legal problems. So even those who need a “bottom line” justification for whatever they do should be able to find reason to read legal theory.

There is also a sense that philosophy, even where it does not have direct applications to grades or to practice, has many indirect benefits. Philosophy trains one to think sharply and logically; one learns how to find the weaknesses in other people’s arguments, and in one’s own; and one learns how to evaluate and defend, as well as attack, claims and positions. Philosophy could thus be seen as a kind of mental exercise program, on a par with chess or bridge (or theology). Giving the centrality of analytical skills to what both lawyers and law students do, one should not quickly dismiss any activity that can help one improve those abilities.

At a professional level, jurisprudence is the way lawyers and judges reflect on what they do and what their role is within society. This truth is reflected by the way jurisprudence is taught as part of a university education in the law, where law is considered not merely as a trade to be learned (like carpentry or fixing automobiles) but as an intellectual pursuit. For those who believe that only the reflective life is worth living, and who also spend most of their waking hours working within (or around) the legal system, there are strong reasons to want to think deeply about the nature and function of law, the legal system, and the legal profession.

Finally, for some (whether the blessed or the cursed, one cannot say), jurisprudence is interesting and enjoyable on its own, whatever its other uses and benefits. There will always be some for whom learning is interesting and valuable in itself, even if it does not lead to greater wealth, greater self-awareness, or greater social progress.

THE SELECTION OF TOPICS

One can find entire books on many of the topics discussed in the present volume in short chapters (or parts of chapters). I have done my best to offer overviews that do not sacrifice the difficulty of the subjects, but I fear that some mis-reading is inevitable in any summary. In part to compensate for the necessarily abbreviated nature of what is offered, a list of “Suggested Further Reading” is offered at the end of each chapter (and there are footnote citations to the primary texts in the course of the chapters) for those who wish to locate longer and fuller discussions of certain topics.

A related problem is that in the limited space available, I could not include all the topics that are associated with jurisprudence (a course whose content varies greatly from university to university, and even from teacher to teacher in the same university). The variety of topics included in one source or another under the category of jurisprudence is vast, so inevitably there always seems to be more missing from than present in any text. Through my silence (or brevity), I do not mean to imply that the topics not covered are not interesting, not important, or not properly part of jurisprudence.

It is inevitable that those using this book will find some chapters more useful for their purposes than others, even (or especially) if they are students using this book to accompany a general jurisprudence course. In particular, the topics in the first part of the book are usually not covered in university courses, though I believe that thinking through some of the questions raised there might help one gain a deeper or more coherent view of jurisprudence as a whole.

One caveat I must offer is that references to legal practice offered in this book will be primarily to the practices in the American and English<sup>4</sup>

---

<sup>4</sup> I am following the usual convention of using the term “English legal system” to refer to the legal system that extends over both England and Wales.

legal systems, as these are the systems with which I am most familiar. It is likely (though far from certain) that any comments based on those two legal systems would be roughly generalised to cover all common law systems. The extent to which my lack of familiarity with civil law systems biases my views about legal theory and about the nature of law I must leave to others to judge.

I take seriously the obligation that comes with publishing a new edition of an existing book. I believe that any new edition should offer resources that the prior edition did not have. While there is rarely time to revisit and rewrite everything, in the preparation of the sixth edition of this book, many of the chapters have been expanded, discussions of the most recent scholarship has been added throughout, and many topics have been significantly rethought. While there are changes throughout the book, the most extensive changes are located in Chapters 2, 3, 7, 9, 15, 18, 21, and 22.

Where possible, I have tried to include references (especially in each chapter's "Suggested Further Reading" list) that are readily accessible: e.g., articles in well-known journals that would be available in most law libraries or from electronic law journal collections (like Hein OnLine), and articles from Internet sources (like The Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy (plato.stanford.edu) and the Social Services Research Network (www.ssrn.com)) that are available without cost (at least at the time of writing).

Work on this book often overlapped with work I was doing for other smaller projects: sometimes work done for the book was borrowed for other projects, and sometimes I found that work done for other projects could be usefully incorporated in the book. An earlier version of parts of Chapter 2 appeared in "Conceptual Questions and Jurisprudence", 1 Legal Theory 415 (1995); earlier versions of parts of Chapters 5, 6, and 7 appeared in "Natural Law Theory", in A Companion to the Philosophy of Law and Legal Theory (D. Patterson, ed., Blackwell, Oxford, 1996, 2nd ed., 2010); an earlier version of brief sections of Chapters 1 and 7 appeared in "Questions in Legal Interpretation", in Law and Interpretation (A. Marmor, ed., Clarendon Press, Oxford, 1995), pp. 137–154; and an earlier version of parts of Chapters 1, 2, and 14 appeared in "Questions in Legal Interpretation", 18 Tel Aviv Law Review 463 (1994) (translated into Hebrew). I am grateful to the publishers of these texts for allowing me permission to use material from those articles.

I would like to thank the following for their helpful comments and suggestions: Mark Addis, Larry Alexander, Jack Balkin, Lisa Bernstein, Scott Brewer, Keith Burgess-Jackson, Kenneth Campbell, Tom Campbell, Richard Delgado, Anuj Desai, Anthony M. Dillof, Neil Duxbury, Neal Feigenson, John Finnis, Stephen Gilles, Martin P. Golding, Aristides N. Hatzis, Alex M. Johnson, Jr., Sanford N. Katz, Matthew H. Kramer, Kenneth J. Kress, Brian Leiter, Andrei Marmor, Jerry Mashaw, Linda R. Meyer, Martha Minow, Thomas Morawetz, Martha C. Nussbaum,

---

Frances Olsen, Dennis Patterson, Stanley L. Paulson, Margaret Jane Radin, Julian Rivers, Daria Roithmayr, Frederick Schauer, Scott Shapiro, A. J. B. Sirks, M. B. E. Smith, Larry Solum, Scott Sturgeon, Brian Tamanaha, Adam Tomkins, Lloyd L. Weinreb, Tony Weir, James Boyd White, Kenneth Winston, Mauro Zamboni, and Yushuang (Alex) Zheng. I am also grateful for the research assistance of Joshua Gitelson, Annie Jacob, Galen Lemei, Ruchita Sethi, Justin Stec, Jason Steck, and Erin Steitz.

Contents

---

Preface to the Sixth Edition	vii
Why Jurisprudence?	viii
The Selection of Topics	ix
List of Cases	xix

PART A Legal Theory: Problems and Possibilities

Chapter One: Overview, Purpose and Methodology	3
Questions and Answers in Jurisprudence	3
Descriptive Theory	4
Transforming the Question	5
To What Extent is it Legal Theory?	7
Suggested Further Reading	8
Chapter Two: Legal Theory: General Jurisprudence and Conceptual Analysis	9
The Problem of Theories of Law	9
Conceptual Analysis	12
Alternative Purposes	19
Challenges to Conceptual Analysis	25
Boundary Lines in Law	27
Conclusion	29
Suggested Further Reading	30

PART B Individual Theories About the Nature of Law

Chapter Three: H. L. A. Hart and Legal Positivism	33
An Overview of Legal Positivism	33
Summary of Hart's Position	37
The Rule of Recognition	40
The Internal Aspect of Rules (and of Law)	41
Open Texture	45
The Minimum Content of Natural Law	48
Inclusive versus Exclusive Legal Positivism	49
Other Approaches	52
Suggested Further Reading	55

Chapter Four: Hans Kelsen's Pure Theory of Law	57
The Pure Theory of Law	58
Reduction and Legal Theory	61
Hart versus Kelsen	63
On the Nature of Norms	65
Suggested Further Reading	65
Chapter Five: Natural Law Theory and John Finnis	67
Traditional Natural Law Theory	67
Medieval and Renaissance Theorists	73
John Finnis	75
Natural Law Theory versus Legal Positivism	77
Other Directions	79
Suggested Further Reading	80
Chapter Six: Understanding Lon Fuller	83
A Different Kind of Natural Law Theory	83
Fuller's Approach	84
Contemporary Views	88
Fuller and Legal Process	88
Suggested Further Reading	89
Chapter Seven: Ronald Dworkin's Interpretive Approach	91
Earlier Writings	91
Constructive Interpretation	93
Right Answers	98
Dworkin versus Hart	100
Debunking Questions	102
Suggested Further Reading	104

PART C Themes and Principles

Chapter Eight: Justice	107
John Rawls and Social Contract Theory	109
Rawls' Two Principles	112
Rawls' Later Modifications	114
Robert Nozick and Libertarianism	115
Michael Sandel, Communitarianism and Civic Republicanism	117
Feminist Critiques	120
Suggested Further Reading	122
Chapter Nine: Punishment	123
Starting Point	123
Retribution	124

“Making Society Better”: Consequentialism/Utilitarianism	126
Other Objectives	127
Suggested Further Reading	128
Chapter Ten: Rights and Rights Talk	131
Hohfeld’s Analysis	134
Will Theory Versus Interest Theory	136
Other Topics	137
Suggested Further Reading	138
Chapter Eleven: Will and Reason	141
Legal Positivism and Natural Law Theory	142
Social Contracts and Economic Analysis	144
Suggested Further Reading	146
Chapter Twelve: Authority, Finality and Mistake	147
Suggested Further Reading	151
Chapter Thirteen: Common Law Reasoning and Precedent	153
Suggested Further Reading	158
Chapter Fourteen: Statutory Interpretation and Legislative Intentions	161
Legislative Intention	161
“Plain Meaning”	163
Suggested Further Reading	166
Chapter Fifteen: Legal Enforcement of Morality	169
Dividing Lines	169
Topics	171
Hart versus Devlin	172
A New Start	175
Suggested Further Reading	178
Chapter Sixteen: The Obligation to Obey the Law	181
Obligation and Consent	182
Other Approaches	184
The Argument Against a General Moral Obligation to Obey	186
Connections	189
Suggested Further Reading	189

PART D Modern Perspectives on Legal Theory

Chapter Seventeen: American Legal Realism	193
The Target: Formalism	195

---

Realism and Legal Analysis	197
Realism and the Courts	200
An Overview and Postscript	202
Suggested Further Reading	204
Chapter Eighteen: Economic Analysis of Law	205
In Search of Consensus	206
The Coase Theorem	211
Description and Analysis	216
Economics and Justice	218
Game Theory	221
Public Choice Theory	224
Other Variations	226
The Limits of Law and Economics	227
Suggested Further Reading	231
Chapter Nineteen: Modern Critical Perspectives	235
Critical Legal Studies	235
“Outsider Jurisprudence”	240
Feminist Legal Theory	241
Critical Race Theory	247
Other Critical Approaches	253
Suggested Further Reading	254
Chapter Twenty: Law and Literature	257
Interpretation and Constraint	258
Other Critics	261
Miscellaneous Connections	262
Suggested Further Reading	263
Chapter Twenty One: Philosophical Foundations of the
Common law	265
Tort Law	266
Contract	267
Property	268
Criminal Law	270
Causation	271
Suggested Further Reading	272
Chapter Twenty Two: Other Approaches	275
Historical Jurisprudence	275
Free Law Movement	276
Marxist Jurisprudence	277
Scandinavian Legal Realism	278
Legal Process	279

---

Pragmatism	280
Postmodernism	284
Suggested Further Reading	287
Bibliography	291
Index	329

List of Cases

---

Adams v Lindsell (1818) 106 Eng. Rep. 250, KB	197n
American Booksellers Assoc. v Hudnut , 771 F.2d 323 (7th Cir. 1985), affid mem., 475 U.S. 1001 (1986)	171n, 245n
Re Baby M , 537 A.2d 1227 (N.J. 1988)	171n
Black-Clauson International Ltd v Papierwerke Waldhof-Aschaffenburg A.G. [1975] 1 All E.R. 810	163n
Board of Education v Barnette , 319 U.S. 624 (1943)	149n
Boomer v Atlantic Cement Co. , 26 N.Y.2d 219, 257 N.E.2d 870, 309 N.Y.S.2d 312 (1970)	218n
Bowers v Hardwick , 478 U.S. 186 (1986)	171n
Brown v Board of Education , 347 U.S. 483 (1954)	151n
Cooper v Aaron , 358 U.S. 1 (1958)	148n
Davis v Johnson [1979] A.C. 264	147, 163
Donoghue v Stevenson [1932] A.C. 562	158
Ellison v Brady , 924 F.2d 872 (9th Cir. 1991)	250n
Garcia v San Antonio Metropolitan Transit Authority , 469 U.S. 528 (1985)	149n
Geduldig v Aiello , 417 U.S. 484 (1974)	174n
Henthorn v Fraser [1892] 2 Ch. 27	197n
Kelo v City of New London , 545 U.S. 469 (2005)	269n
Lawrence v Texas , 539 U.S. 558 (2003)	171n
Lochner v New York , 198 U.S. 45 (1905)	198n
Lynch v Donnelly , 465 U.S. 668 (1984)	250n
MacPherson v Buick Motor Co. , 217 N.Y.382, 111 N.E. 1050 (1916)	158
Madzimbamuto (Stella) v Lardner-Burke N.O. (1968) (2) S.A.L.R. 284	28n
Muller v Oregon , 208 U.S. 412 (1908)	202n
Murphy v Brentwood District Council [1990] 3 W.L.R. 414	149n
Omychund v Barker (Ch. 1744) 1 Atk. 21, 26 Eng. Rep.	95n
Palsgraf v Long Island Railroad , 248 N.Y. 339, 162 N.E. 99 (1928)	198
Pepper v Hart [1993] A.C. 591	163n, 164
Plessy v Ferguson , 163 U.S. 537 (1896)	150n
Ploof v Putnam , 71 A. 188 (Vt. 1908)	269n
Practice Statement (Judicial Precedent) [1966] 1 W.L.R. 1234	154n
R. v Brown [1994] 1 A.C. 212	158n, 171n
R. v Shivpuri [1987] A.C. 1	149n

River Wear Commissioners v Adamson (1877) 2 App. Cas. 743	165n
Schwegmann Bros. v Calvert Distillers Corp. , 341 U.S. 384 (1951)	163n
Southern Pacific v Jensen , 244 U.S. 205 (1917)	154n, 198n
Swift v Tyson , 41 U.S. 1 (1842)	154n
Uganda v Commissioner of Prisons, Ex p. Matovu [1966] East Afr. L.R. 514	28n
United States v Carroll Towing Co. , 159 F.2d 169 (2nd Cir. 1947)	217n
United States v E.C. Knight Co. , 156 U.S. 1 (1895)	196
Vincent v Lake Erie Transportation Co. , 124 N.W. 221 (Minn. 1910)	269n
Young v Bristol Aeroplane Co. Ltd. [1944] K.B. 718	147n, 154n