

Fear of Crime in the United States

Causes, Consequences, and Contradictions

Jodi Lane

Nicole E. Rader

Billy Henson

Bonnie S. Fisher

David C. May

CAROLINA ACADEMIC PRESS

Durham, North Carolina

Copyright © 2014
Carolina Academic Press
All Rights Reserved

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Lane, Jodi, 1967-

Fear of crime in the United States : causes, consequences, and contradictions / Jodi Lane, Nicole Rader, David C. May, Bonnie S. Fisher, Billy Henson.

pages cm

Includes bibliographical references and index.

ISBN 978-1-61163-066-4 (alk. paper)

1. Fear of crime--United States. 2. Fear of crime--United States--Public opinion. 3. Crime--United States. I. Title.

HV6250.3.U5L357 2014

364.97301'9--dc23

2014006968

CAROLINA ACADEMIC PRESS
700 Kent Street
Durham, North Carolina 27701
Telephone (919) 489-7486
Fax (919) 493-5668
www.cap-press.com

Printed in the United States of America

For Our Patient and Supportive Families

Chris and Cooper Wilson

Cody, Lucas, and Kate Rader

Sally Paulson

Nicolas, Olivia, and Camille Williams

Natalie, James, Will, and Grace May

For Our Students Who Listened Attentively and

Then Asked Insightful Questions

Contents

Acknowledgments	xiii
Chapter 1 · The Current State of Fear of Crime in America: A Broad Overview	3
Fear Is an Emotion	5
Development of Fear over the Life Course	6
The Prevalence of Fear of Crime	7
Fear of Crime Levels	7
Implications of Fear of Crime in Society	11
Fear of Crime and Race Relations	11
Fear of Crime's Impact on Residential Housing	12
Fear of Crime and Its Transformation of Democracy	14
Fear of Crime and Policing	16
Fear of Crime and the Media	17
References	22
Chapter 2 · Reviewing the Fear of Crime Literature: What Has     Been Learned from 45 Years of Research?	27
Birth of Fear of Crime Research	28
The Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice	29
Development of Victimization Surveys	30
1971–1985: The Infancy Era of Fear of Crime Research	31
Trends in Fear of Crime Research	31
Key Fear of Crime Studies	34
1986–2000: Adolescence Era of Fear of Crime Research	35
Trends in Fear of Crime Research	36
Key Fear of Crime Studies	39
2001–Present: The Maturation of Fear of Crime Research	42
Trends in Fear of Crime Research	43
Significant Fear of Crime Studies	46
Concluding Remarks	49
References	50

Chapter 3 · Measuring Fear of Crime over the Years: Sundry
Methods Muddle the Validity	57
Experiencing Fear	57
The Neuroanatomical Location of Fear: It Is All in Your Head	58
Muddling the Validity of Measuring Fear of Crime	60
Conceptualizing and Defining Fear of Crime	60
Evolution of Fear of Crime Measures	62
Measurement Issues That Muddle the Validity of Fear of Crime	73
Formless versus Concrete Crime-Specific Measures	73
Use of Broad Context Measures versus Specific Measures	75
Dichotomous Response Options	76
Measures of Fear versus Measures of Risk	76
Improvements to Measuring Fear of Crime	78
Changes in Question Wording	78
Changes in Response Options	79
Fear of Crime versus Perceived Risk	79
Additional Fear-Related Measures	79
Concluding Remarks	80
References	81
Chapter 4 · Gender: The Most Consistent Predictor of Fear of Crime	87
Women and Men Face Different Types of Victimization Risk	88
Women and Men Differ in Their Levels of Crime-Related Fear	89
Explaining Women's Fear of Crime	90
Demographic Correlates That Affect Women's Fear of Crime	91
Social Class and Race	92
Marriage and Children	93
Theoretical Explanations for Women's Fear of Crime	93
Irrationality Perspective	94
Vulnerability Perspective	94
Socialization	95
Parents	96
Media Impacts	98
Patriarchy (or Social Control)	98
Shadow of Sexual Assault	101
Hidden Victimization Perspective	102
Men's Fear of Crime	103
"Boys Don't Cry"	104
Men's Fear Is Situational	105

Altruistic Fear among Women and Men	107
Concluding Remarks	108
References	110
Chapter 5 · How and Why Age, Race/Ethnicity, and Socioeconomic Status Contribute to Fear of Crime	117
The Importance of Vulnerability	118
Physical Vulnerability	119
Social Vulnerability	119
Age and Fear of Crime	120
Fear among the Elderly	121
Personal Characteristics	121
Why Some Senior Citizens Are Afraid	122
Fear among the Young	124
Fear of Crime among Youths at or to and from School	124
Fear of Crime among Young Offenders	126
Explaining Fear Levels among Young People	127
Race/Ethnicity and Fear of Crime	130
Fear of Crime Experiences by Race/Ethnicity	130
Explaining Fear among Racial and Ethnic Minorities	131
Poverty, Vulnerability, and Fear of Crime	133
Explaining Fear among Lower Income Groups	135
Concluding Remarks	135
References	137
Chapter 6 · The Influence of Contextual Predictors on Fear of Crime: Personal Experience, Indirect Victimization, and Community	147
Personal Experiences with Crime—Victimization, Observation, and Criminal Behavior	149
Personal Victimization	149
Witnessing Victimization of Others	151
Participating in Crime	154
Indirect Experiences with Crime—Media, Friends, Family, and Community Policing Officers	155
Newspapers and Television	156
Friends, Family, and Community Police Officers	159
Community-Level Cues That Crime May Be Near—Subcultural Diversity, Disorder, and Community Decline	160

Social Disorganization Framework	161
Subcultural Diversity/Racial Heterogeneity	161
Disorder/Incivilities	162
Community Concern/Decline	164
The Connections between the Environmental Context Models	164
Immediate Situational Cues That Crime May Occur	166
Concluding Remarks	166
References	167
Chapter 7 · Consequences of Fear of Crime: Physical, Psychological, Behavioral, and Social Effects	181
Physical Consequences of Fear	182
Psychological Consequences	183
Social Consequences of Fear	183
Behavioral Consequences	183
Defining Constrained Behaviors	184
Research on Constrained Behaviors	185
Avoidance Behaviors	187
Environmental Design and Fear of Crime	190
Protective Behaviors	193
Weapons Behaviors	196
Adult Firearm Possession for Protection	197
Owning/Carrying Weapons for Protection among Adolescents	200
Concluding Remarks	202
References	204
Chapter 8 · Tying the Findings Together: Suggestions for Policy and Future Research on Fear of Crime	211
Summarizing Fear of Crime Research	212
Implications for Policy and Practice	216
Reduce Crime	216
Educate the Public on Crime and Their Personal Risk	219
Educate People on Local Crime	219
Target Some Educational Efforts	220
Teach People about Other Racial and Ethnic Groups and Other Cultures	222
Reduce Opportunities for Victimization	223
Reduce Neighborhood Disorder and Reverse Community Decline	225
Consider Restricting Media and Video Game Violence Content	226

Implications for Future Research	227
Continue to Improve and Expand Measurement	227
Continue to Compare Causes and Consequences of Fear across Subpopulations	230
Conduct More Qualitative Studies to Expand and Build upon Theory	232
Evaluate the Impact of Crime Prevention Measures on Fear of Crime	232
Conduct Studies That Examine the Impact of Understudied Factors on Fear	233
Personal Victimization	233
Witnessing Crime against Others	234
Witnessing Crime Events on Television (or Internet Feed)	234
The Impact of the Internet	235
The Impact of Social Networks	235
Effects of Urban Legends	236
Different Routes to “Community Concern”	236
Reciprocal Effects of Behavioral Precautions and Fear of Crime	236
Conduct More Studies on Altruistic Fear	237
Synthesize Theoretical Ideas into a Comprehensive Model	238
Final Words	239
References	239
Index	249

Acknowledgments

All of us were able to work on this book because we had the help of others, throughout our careers and during the writing process. We are especially grateful to Beth Hall at Carolina Academic Press for her patience and helpful advice while we developed and wrote this manuscript. Graduate students Caitlin Henriksen at the University of Cincinnati and Ethan Stokes at Mississippi State University provided countless hours of help at the end of the writing process by carefully reviewing, formatting, and proofreading each chapter. We also thank all of our academic and practitioner colleagues who influenced the development our ideas about fear of crime over the years.

Jodi especially thanks the University of Florida for allowing her to take a sabbatical leave during the 2013–2014 school year (a break from teaching and service to focus on research), which facilitated the completion of this book. She also thanks her family, Chris and Cooper, for their patience and understanding during the writing process as well as the fun diversions they provided. She also thanks Cooper's grandparents—Jackie, Lou, and Jo—for regularly keeping Cooper entertained while she works on research.

Nicole would like to thank Cody, Lucas, and Kate for their support, for keeping her grounded, and for making life more fun than she ever expected. She would also like to thank her colleagues at Mississippi State University who have been amazingly supportive and wonderful to her over the years. Finally, she'd like to thank Michelle Hughes Miller (University of South Florida) for believing in her in the beginning and fostering her fear of crime scholarship.

Billy would like to thank his fellow authors for their guidance during the process of writing this book. As this was his first experience writing a book, he is very thankful for their patience and leadership. He would also like to give a special thanks to Bonnie Fisher for introducing him to the world of fear of crime and for her mentoring and friendship over the years. Finally, he would like to thank his fiancée Sally for the support she gives him everyday.

Bonnie expresses her gratitude to Wesley Skogan who showed her how fascinating the study of fear of crime could be, especially its measurement, while she was his graduate student years ago. That interest remains with her today. Thanks to her students who have endured years of fear of crime discussions in and outside the classroom, especially Billy who listened! Most of all, she thanks her family—Nick, Olivia and Camille—for their years of love, support and sense of humor every day.

David would like to thank his family, Natalie, James, Will, and Grace May, for their understanding for those times when he couldn't do whatever they requested because he was "writing a book." He would also like to thank the coauthors of this book and his colleagues in the Mississippi State University Department of Sociology for their patience, prayers, thoughts, generosity, and kindness in the journey through Natalie's cancer that occurred concurrently with the writing of this book.