Media Coverage of Crime and Criminal Justice

SECOND EDITION

Matthew B. Robinson
Contents

Preface ix

Chapter 1 · Introduction to the Media, Part I: Who Owns the Media and What Are the Goals of the Media? 3

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Learning Objectives</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Introduction</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Types of Media</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>How the Media Are Organized</td>
<td>7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Three Rings of the Media</td>
<td>7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Media and Business: Profit over Information?</td>
<td>9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Important Concepts of Corporate Influence</td>
<td>14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Concerns about Corporate-Owned Media</td>
<td>17</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Goals of the Media</td>
<td>23</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Propaganda Filters</td>
<td>25</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Media Concentration and Profit Orientation</td>
<td>26</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Advertising</td>
<td>27</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Relying on Official Sources</td>
<td>30</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Flak</td>
<td>33</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Anti-Communism</td>
<td>33</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Outcomes of the Five Filters</td>
<td>35</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Summary</td>
<td>40</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Discussion Questions</td>
<td>42</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Chapter 2 · Introduction to the Media, Part II: What the Media Do and Do Not Do, and How They Do It 43

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Learning Objectives</td>
<td>43</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Introduction</td>
<td>44</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What the Media Do and Do Not Do</td>
<td>45</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Models of Media Behavior</td>
<td>48</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Objective Model</td>
<td>48</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Subjective Model</td>
<td>53</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
CONTENTS

Moral Panics 58
Does It Matter? Are People Exposed to the Media? 67
Summary 71
Discussion Questions 73

Chapter 3 · Media Coverage of Law-Making and Crime, Part I: Focus on the Random, the Serious, and the Violent
Learning Objectives 76
Introduction 76
Media and the Law 77
Access to the Law 77
Passage of Laws 79
Lack of Depth/Context: The Case of the USA PATRIOT Act 81
Media and Crime 87
Misconceptions of Crime 88
Serious and Violent Crime 91
Homicide 96
Serial Killers 99
Random Crime 100
Sexual Assault and Stalking 106
Summary 109
Discussion Questions 111

Chapter 4 · Media Coverage of Law-Making and Crime, Part II: Focus on the Black, the Young, and the “Crazy”
Learning Objectives 113
Introduction 114
No Context Necessary 115
The Same Crime Over and Over 117
Crime Appears More Widespread Than It Is 117
The Color of Crime 122
Female Violence and Victimization 125
Child Offenders and Victims 127
Focus on Individual Motives 131
Mentally Ill Offenders 134
Media and Fear of Crime: The Chicken Little Phenomenon 136
Violence Begets Violence? 142
Ignore Corporate and White-Collar Crime 145
Summary 150
Discussion Questions 153
Chapter 5 · Media Coverage of Policing: The Effective Law Enforcer, the Bad Cop, and Crime Prevention

Learning Objectives 156
Introduction 157
Front-End Loaded 157
Disproportionate Focus on Local Cops and Local Crime 160
Overemphasize the Law Enforcement Role 161
Police Are Effective at Reducing Crime 163
Reinforce Crime Control 166
The “Perp Walk” 167
Good Cop, Bad Cop 168
Police Profiling 170
Police Brutality 174
The TASER 177
Corruption 180
How the Media Hinder Crime Control and Crime Prevention 183
How the Media Help Crime Control and Crime Prevention 184
The Public Health Example 184
Effective Crime Prevention 188
Summary 191
Discussion Questions 193

Chapter 6 · Media Coverage of Courts and Judicial Processes: Trials, Publicity, and Sentencing

Learning Objectives 195
Introduction 196
Ignore Most of What Courts Do 197
Focus on State Courts and Street Crime 200
Disproportionate Focus on the Poor and People of Color 202
Mischaracterize the Nature of Courtroom Procedures 203
The Great Myth of the Criminal Trial 208
High Profile Trials 212
Cameras in Court 215
Pre-Trial Publicity 217
Sentencing 219
Bias in the Sentencing Process 221
Reinforce Crime Control 224
Summary 225
Discussion Questions 227
Preface

Every citizen, every day, has contact with the media in some form. Whether it is in the form of advertising, news or entertainment, and whether it is television, Internet, newspaper, radio, or some other form of media, the media are inescapable. As a result, the media impact our world in very important ways.

For many Americans today, relatively new forms of media have even greater impacts on our lives. For example, we often rely heavily on websites, social network sites, blogs, and so forth for both news and entertainment.

From the very founding of the press in America, crime and criminal justice have held a prominent place in the media. Today, news about crime and criminal justice and entertainment centering on it are widespread. Thus, crime and punishment are often on the forefront of Americans’ minds.

Unfortunately, images of crime and criminal justice in the media tend to diverge from reality in important ways. This explains why people who rely on media for their information about crime and criminal justice tend to hold misconceptions about crime, criminals, and criminal justice practice. Media Coverage of Crime and Criminal Justice critically examines media coverage of crime and criminal justice to help correct these misconceptions and shed light on important realities of crime and criminal justice in the United States.

While there are other texts on the market focused on the impact of mass media on criminal justice, this text is the only one that starts with the issue of corporate ownership of the mass media as a potential problem for gaining an accurate understanding of the realities of crime and criminal justice. Further, this text presents basic information about the media in the introductory chapters and then applies this information to specific issues of crime and criminal justice in the rest of the book, thereby focusing on the same issues and themes throughout the book.

In this book, the reader will learn what is meant by the terms “media” and “mainstream media” and also will learn about alternative sources of media information. Topics analyzed include how the media are organized, how they operate, and to what degree citizens are exposed to the media. Additionally, the book analyzes competing explanations of media coverage of crime and criminal justice, using examples from the real world to show why the media cover topics (and ignore others) the way they do.

The book deals with media coverage of law-making and crime, policing, courts, and corrections. There are separate chapters of media coverage of each branch of criminal justice, with reviews of the literature focused on the most recent and influential research on these topics. The book also examines how the media both help and hinder effective crime control and crime prevention efforts. The book concludes with a summary of the book as well as suggestions for media reform, based on major findings of the book.

Most of the book deals with media that are aimed at providing information to citizens (the news, for example). Yet, the book also analyzes literature on entertainment media and how issues of crime and criminal justice are depicted on television, in movies, music, and so forth. This is important for at least two reasons: First, crime is very popular in modern entertainment; and second, most U.S. citizens spend more time interacting with entertainment media than with news media. Importantly, I’ve included an entirely online chapter devoted to infotainment and entertainment media (e.g., TV shows, movies, music) so that it can be updated regularly to account for new shows, songs, and influences in Hollywood. That chapter is located at: http://gjs.appstate.edu/research/media.

In my teaching and writing about criminal justice reform in the United States, I’ve learned that little criminal justice reform is possible without considering needed reforms in the way American media are organized and operate. One goal of this book is to provide the information necessary to understand how to achieve such reform. While the book can thus be considered “activist” in nature in that it clearly has an agenda, the material is presented in a fair and objective manner. First and foremost, the goal of the book is to tell the truth about the media.

I start with this important point: It is impossible to fully understand criminal justice—the law, crime, police, courts, corrections—without studying the media. This is because the media play such an important role in criminal justice policy. The media impact criminal justice policy directly (e.g., by featuring criminal justice officials in stories) and indirectly (e.g., by impacting public perceptions of crime, justice and injustice). Ray Surette agrees, writing “crime, justice, and the media have to be studied together because in twenty-first century America they are inseparable, wedded to each other in a forced marriage. They cohabitate in an often raucous, sometimes riotous, but ultimately unavoidable relationship.”

Given the numerous interrelationships between the media and criminal justice agencies, it is not possible to fully understand criminal justice practice without understanding the media. If you are a student of criminal justice, reading this book will not only teach you about the media but will also help you gain a more complete understanding of the realities of criminal justice practice.

Each arrow in the figure represents a relationship between some aspect of criminal justice and the media. For example, when crimes are committed—especially certain types of crimes (e.g., random, violent crimes against innocent victims)—they are often broadcast in the news media. The media also rely on police personnel for information about crimes after they occur as well as allow the police to appear in their stories. At each stage of the criminal justice process, the media play an important role, as when the media cover a high profile criminal trial or an escape from a prison.

Finally, it is important to note that there are new examples of media coverage of crime, criminal justice, and related topics literally every day. For this reason, it is important that you pay attention to the news and entertainment media as you read this book. By doing so, you will see the most current examples of issues and topics raised in this book. It is also recommended that you visit the website related to this book. Here you will find many more examples of media coverage of crime, criminal justice and related topics, as well as links to media organizations and groups working to change the media. You will also find links to blogs about the media, crime, criminal justice, and related topics. Look for the following symbol throughout the book:
This symbol will alert you to additional information on various topics that have been placed on the website: http://gjs.appstate.edu/research/media

Features

The author of the text created and maintains a blog on media coverage of crime and criminal justice which is available at: http://mediacriminaljustice.blogspot.com/. The blog is updated five days a week with stories in the media. Students can go to this blog, register as a new user, subscribe to the blog, and then participate in discussions with the author as well as other users on the latest stories being covered in the media.

In addition to the blog, the text features learning objectives to alert readers what they should learn as they read the book as well as matching discussion questions that can be used to test your knowledge and generate discussion in and out of class. Key terms are also identified to alert readers of the most important concepts identified in the text. Finally, activities are included at the end of the book that can be used in class or out of class that allow readers to apply material from the book to the real world and that empower readers to make the material more relevant for their own lives.