Series Editor's Foreword

The Carolina Academic Press African World Series, inaugurated in 2010, offers significant new works in the field of African and Black World studies. The series provides scholarly and educational texts that can serve both as reference works and as readers in college classes.

Studies in the series are anchored in the existing humanistic and the social scientific traditions. Their goal, however, is the identification and elaboration of the strategic place of Africa and its Diaspora in a shifting global world. More specifically, the studies will address gaps and larger needs in the developing scholarship on Africa and the Black World.

The series intends to fill gaps in areas such as African politics, history, law, religion, culture, sociology, literature, philosophy, visual arts, art history, geography, language, health, and social welfare. Given the complex nature of Africa and its Diaspora, and the constantly shifting perspectives prompted by globalization, the series also meets a vital need for scholarship connecting knowledge with events and practices. Reflecting the fact that life in Africa continues to change, especially in the political arena, the series explores issues emanating from racial and ethnic identities, particularly those connected with the ongoing mobilization of ethnic minorities for inclusion and representation.

Acknowledgments

This book would not have been written without the support of many individuals and organizations, and I am happy to acknowledge their help. This project began as an offshoot of my earlier book, The Land Has Changed: History, Society and Gender in Colonial Eastern Nigeria. I was encouraged by Dr. Dmitri van den Bersselaar of the University of Liverpool, who read the early drafts of that manuscript, to publish this collection in a separate volume. The British Academy offered me a fellowship at Oxford University in 2008 that enabled me to work on this project and consult the National Archives in Kew Garden, London. I am grateful to my hosts at St Anthony's College, Oxford, Professor David Anderson, the Director of the African Studies Center, and Dr. David Pratten, for supporting me during the period of my fellowship. The West African Research Association provided me funding that enabled me to work at the National Archive of Nigeria Enugu to work on the project. Marquette University, through its summer fellowship, supplied funding that enabled me to complete this project. I owe a lot of debt to the staff of Enugu and Calabar archives in Nigeria, where I have developed enduring friendships. I thank Kelly Smale, my research assistant at Marquette University, for extraordinary effectiveness and editorial assistant.

My project was completed with the important discussions I had with friends and colleagues. It would be impossible to mention all of them. First, I am grateful to Professor Ayodeji Olukoju who saw the potential in this work. I would also like to thank Professor Toyin Falola for supporting the publication of this work. I thank Apollos and Helen Nwauwa for their extraordinary friendship. Raph Njoku, E. C. Ejiogu, K. K. Odeuga and many others encouraged me to continue this work that provides a voice for the forgotten actors of history. I remain grateful to all.
