Series Editor's Foreword

The Carolina Academic Press African World Series, inaugurated in 2010, offers significant new works in the field of African and Black World studies. The series provides scholarly and educational texts that can serve both as reference works and as readers in college classes.

Studies in the series are anchored in the existing humanistic and the social scientific traditions. Their goal, however, is the identification and elaboration of the strategic place of Africa and its Diaspora in a shifting global world. More specifically, the studies will address gaps and larger needs in the developing scholarship on Africa and the Black World.

The series intends to fill gaps in areas such as African politics, history, law, religion, culture, sociology, literature, philosophy, visual arts, art history, geography, language, health, and social welfare. Given the complex nature of Africa and its Diaspora, and the constantly shifting perspectives prompted by globalization, the series also meets a vital need for scholarship connecting knowledge with events and practices. Reflecting the fact that life in Africa continues to change, especially in the political arena, the series explores issues emanating from racial and ethnic identities, particularly those connected with the ongoing mobilization of ethnic minorities for inclusion and representation.

History, Politics and Power in Zimbabwe* (New York: Palgrave Macmillan, August 2015); The Decolonial Mandela: Peace, Justice and Politics of Life (New York and Oxford: Berghahn Books, forthcoming) He is the Editor-In-Chief of the Africa Insight published by Africa Institute of South Africa (AISA) and the Human Sciences Research Council (HSRC) in South Africa and Deputy Editor of the International Journal of African Renaissance Studies published by the University of South Africa Press and Francis and Taylor.

Siphamandla Zondi researches Africa's international relations with an interest in promoting African renaissance in a world that must decolonise. His recent publications cover issues of African agency in international diplomacy, peace diplomacy in Madagascar and Zimbabwe, SA's Ubuntu diplomacy and NATO's imperial designs over Libya. He is the executive director of the Institute for Global Dialogue, a Unisa-associated foreign policy think tank based in Pretoria. Zondi teaches African renaissance at Thabo Mbeki African Leadership Institute and Africa and international organisations at University of Johannesburg, while he also guides MA and PhD students at the Universities of North-West and Kwazulu-Natal. He completed his undergraduate studies at University of Durban-Westville in South Africa and his MPhil and PhD at Cambridge University, UK.

Tendayi Sithole is Associate Professor for African Politics at the University of South Africa. He holds a doctorate in African Politics and his research focused on the political thought of Achille Mbembe. His research interests are black radical thought, decoloniality, Africana existential phenomenology, and Black Consciousness. He is completing a book on the meditations of Steve Biko.

Serges Djoyou Kamga is Associate Professor at the Thabo Mbeki African Leadership Institute (TMALI), UNISA. He is a member of the 'building committee' of the Cross-Cultural Human Rights Centre, a consortium of ten Chinese and four African universities aimed at bringing Southern concepts and ideas in the area of human rights to Northern audiences. His areas of interest include the African renaissance, good governance, the African human rights system, development and human rights, socio-economic rights, disability rights, gender justice as well as well human rights from a cross-cultural perspective. He publishes in these areas. Professor Kamga holds an LLD from the Centre for Human Rights, University of Pretoria.

Teboho J. Lebakeng obtained his doctorate degree from the University of Limpopo, South Africa; MA in Sociology from the University of Dar es Salaam, Tanzania; MS in Human Service Management at Springfield College, USA; and BA in Sociology from the American University in Cairo, Egypt. Dr Lebakeng has published numerous academic and popular articles in journals, newspapers and book chapters. Although currently with the South African Permanent Mission to the United Nations in New York, Dr. Lebakeng continues to contribute scholarly and popular works, especially on the impact of epistemicide and valuecide on education in general and the social sciences and humanities in particular.

Nontyatyambo Pearl Dastile is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of Criminology and Security Sciences at the University of South Africa. Her research interests include female criminality, gender and crime, decolonial school of thought and African centred paradigms.

Fidelis Allen is Associate Professor and Acting Director of University of Port Harcourt Centre for Ethnic and Conflict Studies. He has published fairly well in local and international journals. Allen is the author of Implementation of Oil-Related Environmental Policy in Nigeria: Government Inertia and Conflict in the Niger Delta (Cambridge Scholars Publishing London).

Nokuthula Hlabangane was awarded a PhD in Anthropology in 2012 by the University of the Witwatersrand, South Africa. Her doctoral thesis is titled “The political economy of teenage sexuality in the time of HIV/AIDS: The case of Soweto, South Africa.” Her research interests include Knowledge and power, sexuality, gender and reproductive health, religion and ritual, urbanization, violence and transition, and anthropology of community. So far, her research interests have directed her towards home—she chooses to be a student in her own community—the reasons have been both ideological and practical. Her ethics are about redress and restoration and as such she has a vested interest in decolonizing Anthropology by painting pictures of strength and resilience where others have left bleak images of savagery and inferiority. Her research practices shy away from delving into cultural pluralism, a fascination with the thick description of the mundane-made-exotic. Rather, she attempts to interpret micro-practices through macro-systems. She is aware of meditations that speak to “African anthropologies” as her thinking is informed by decolonial meditations that places a responsibility for African(ist) intellectuals to see Africa from within. She also gravitates towards inter/a-disciplinarity in her thinking and research. Hlabangane teaches at the University of South Africa.

Morgan Ndlovu is a lecturer in the Department of Development Studies at the University of South Africa. He holds a PhD in Social Anthropology from Monash University (Australia), an MSc in Social Research Methods from Sussex University (United Kingdom) and an MA from the University of the Witwatersrand (South Africa). He has published a number of journal articles and book chapters on identity, culture and development in Africa. He is currently editing book entitled: “Simulating Identity in the Age of Modernity/Coloniality in South Africa.”

Zodwa Radebe holds a BA (Hons) and MA in anthropology, both from Wits University. She is a PhD candidate in the department of anthropology at UNISA, her thesis focusing on informal economy. She teaches at UNISA in the department of Anthropology and Archaeology. She is an artist, an activist and a decolonial scholar that is imagining a different world. Her contributions are through storytelling performances and scholarly work.

William Mpofu holds a Masters in Communication Science. His research interests are in Political Communication, African Literature, Semiotics and Philosophy of Liberation. He is presently a researcher at the Unisa College of Human Sciences, reading for a PhD in the Philosophy of Liberation.

Puleng Segalo is Associate Professor in Social and Community Psychology at University of South Africa. She holds a Masters and PhD in psychology from City University of New York. Her areas of specialization include Community Psychology, Social Psychology and Gender and Feminism in Psychology. Her research work and publications cover a wide range of areas including gendered experiences of women in various aspects of life, Critical Participatory Research Practices and Knowledge Production, Power and Decoloniality. Professor Segalo has won several performance awards, the latest being Young Woman Scientist Award won in 2014.
