

Literary Pan-Africanism

Literary Pan-Africanism

History, Contexts, and Criticism

Christel N. Temple

CAROLINA ACADEMIC PRESS
Durham, North Carolina

Copyright © 2005
by Christel N. Temple
All rights reserved.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Temple, Christel N.

Literary Pan-Africanism : history, contexts, and criticism / by Christel N.
Temple.

p. cm.

Includes bibliographical references.

ISBN 0-89089-848-0

1. African literature—20th century—History and criticism. 2. American literature—African American authors—History and criticism. 3. American literature—20th century—History and criticism. I. Title

PN849.A35T46 2003

809'.8896'009045—dc22

2003065296

CAROLINA ACADEMIC PRESS
700 Kent Street
Durham, North Carolina 27701
Telephone (919) 489-7486
Fax (919) 489-5668
www.cap-press.com

Printed in the United States of America.

Contents

Acknowledgments	vii
Chapter 1 Defining Literary Pan-Africanism	3
The African Vision of the African-American Experience	15
Chapter 2 Historical Premises of African and African-American Relationships	25
African Consciousness of the Enslavement Experience from the Fifteenth to the Nineteenth Centuries	25
Conflicting European and African Worldviews: Manipulated Communication	31
Myths and Resistance	34
Pathology of the Enslavement Trade	41
Healing and Pan-Africanism	44
Literary Implications of Enslavement History	46
Twentieth-Century African and Trans-Atlantic Relations: History, Ideology, and Concept	47
Historiography and Dialectics of the Relationship	49
Late Nineteenth-Century Connections	50
Early Twentieth-Century Pan-African Organization	53
Marcus Garvey and Pan-Africanism since the 1920s	55
Problems: America's Mystique and Divide and Conquer	57
The Role of Organizations: Post-Independence and Beyond	59
The Role of Conferences: Post-Independence and Beyond	60
Changes in Pan-Africanism	62
Getting More Familiar: Africans on African-Americans	63

Chapter 3	Literary History and Foundations: Black Orpheus and Critical Paradigms	69
	The Journal Tradition in West Africa	70
	Black Orpheus	72
	Concepts of Pan-Africanism and Regeneration in West African Literature	89
Chapter 4	Truth or Satire: Wole Soyinka and Black America	95
	Soyinka's Complete Vision of the African American Experience	95
	Literary Criticism on Joe Golder	104
	Coming to Terms with Discrepancies Regarding Joe Golder	115
Chapter 5	"They Have Forgotten!": Ama Ata Aidoo Brings Strangers Back Home	119
	Aidoo: A Pan-African Mediator	124
	Anowa and Other Works by Aidoo	137
	Kinship and Integration in Ghanaian Culture	143
Chapter 6	Recognition and Belonging: Kofi Awoonor and Ayi Kwei Armah's Pan-African Regeneration	147
	Kofi Awoonor's Comes the Voyager At Last	150
	The Concept of Time in Comes the Voyager At Last	156
	Regeneration in Comes the Voyager At Last	158
	Pan-Africanism in Comes the Voyager At Last	159
	Ayi Kwei Armah's Osiris Rising	161
	The Epitome of Regeneration	164
	Ast: Positive Icon of Armah's Vision of the African-American Experience	166
	Pan-Africanism in Osiris Rising	167
	Armah's Contribution to Literary Pan-Africanism	178
	Conclusion	181
	Bibliography	183
	Index	195

Acknowledgments

Life is much sweeter when a person enjoys her work. It has been a privilege to prepare this book, especially to be led by the ancestors to delve deeply into history, literature, and cultural criticism to find out what ideas my forbearers left for me to uncover. I hope this volume provides answers to the questions that many of us in the United States, on the continent of Africa, and in the Diaspora at-large have pondered for centuries. I also pray that the masses of people of African descent who now reside in the United States, who struggle to understand each other, and who share an identity as Africans in America (whether the route here was through enslavement or through modern migration) use this text to discover the need to be on one accord.

This project has been through many revisions and could not have been completed without the early support and mentoring of Dr. C. Tsehloane Keto (who became an ancestor on March 2, 2004), Dr. Miriam DeCosta-Willis, Dr. Joyce Ann Joyce, and Dr. Ayele Bekerie. To Dr. Sonia Sanchez, I know you were busy, but you carved out time from your schedule to support this project. The recent support of individuals and organizations such as Dr. Molefi K. Asante and the Annual Cheikh Anta Diop Conference, The College Language Association (CLA), The African Heritage Studies Association (AHSA), and the National Council for Black Studies (NCBS) is invaluable for the inspiration, professional vision, and dedicated investment in and mentoring of scholars in the discipline of African American Studies. Many thanks go to my colleagues and friends in the Africana Studies Department of the University of Maryland, Baltimore County (UMBC): Dr. Thomas N. Robinson, Jr., Dr. Willie-Lamoussé-Smith, Dr. Jonathan Peters, Dr. Acklyn Lynch (retired), and Mrs. Deborah Cherry.

Finally, I give a special thanks to my family, especially Rev. Fernando E. Temple, Sr., and Mrs. Annelore Dent Temple, whose unwavering love and support are foundations for my prosperity.

I hold the editors of Carolina Academic Press in high regard. Thank you CAP, in particular, for not being afraid of or intimidated by African-centered literary criticism.

Christel N. Temple
Baltimore, Maryland
March 17, 2004